3 INTRODUCTION

4 Appellant Claudia J. Plotnick ("Plotnick") appeals the 5 bankruptcy court's order under 11 U.S.C. § 110(h)² directing 6 Plotnick to disgorge $50 of the $250 document preparation fee 7 that she charged debtor Jacqueline S. Hill ("Hill") for helping 8 prepare Hill's bankruptcy petition and related paperwork. We 9 AFFIRM.

10 FACTS

11 In June 2010, Hill, in propria persona, filed her chapter 7
12 petition. Plotnick, who is a Certified Legal Document Preparer 13 ("CLDP") under Arizona law,³ helped Hill prepare her petition and 14 related paperwork, including Hill's schedules, accompanying 15 statements, declarations and disclosures, and her master mailing 16

17 ²Unless specified otherwise, all chapter and section 18 references are to the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101-1532, and 19 all "Rule" references are to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy 20 Procedure, Rules 1001-9037.

21 ³Under Arizona law, CLDPs are "individual[s] or business 22 entit[ies] certified . . . to prepare or provide legal documents, 23 without the supervision of an attorney, for an entity or a member 24 of the public who is engaging in self representation in any legal 25 matter." Ariz. Code Judicial Admin. § 7-208(A). Certification
26 of CLDPs is done by a Board of Legal Document Preparers. Id.
27 § 7-208(D)(4). CLDPs may provide general legal information but 28 may not give legal advice. Id. § 7-208(F)(1)(b). CLDPs who act in accordance with Section 7-208 are exempt from Arizona prohibitions regarding the unauthorized practice of law. Ariz.
S. Ct. Rule 31(d)(24). For a fuller version of the relevant rules, see note 6 and accompanying text infra.

CLDPs are unique to Arizona, and have existed formally only since 2003. See Frances Johansen, Historic Era Begins: New Rules Cripple UPL, Aid Consumers, ARIZ. ATT'Y, June, 2003, at 36.

1 list.⁴

2 Pursuant to § 110(h)(2), on June 29, 2010, Plotnick filed a 3 disclosure reflecting that she charged and was paid $250 for her 4 Petition Preparer services. Based on Plotnick's disclosure, on 5 July 7, 2010, the bankruptcy court entered an order directing 6 Plotnick to show cause why she should not be ordered to disgorge 7 "any fees in excess of $200" paid to her in connection with 8 Hill's bankruptcy case (the "OSC"). According to the OSC, "[t]he 9 standard fee amount allowed to be paid to certified document 10 preparers in Arizona for bankruptcy is $200." Order to Show 11 Cause (July 7, 2010), at p. 1.

12 On July 28, 2010, Plotnick filed her response to the OSC.
13 Her response is critical to the resolution of this appeal, so we 14 will discuss it at length. Plotnick's response consisted of 15 seven pages of argument and a two-page Exhibit "A", which 16 Plotnick described as a printout of emails that she received from 17 three of her customers in cases other than Hill's.

18 Plotnick's response began by explaining that Hill's 19 California attorney Amanda Potier had referred Hill to Plotnick

21
22 ⁴The bankruptcy court neither raised nor explored the issue 23 of whether Plotnick might have exceeded § 110's strict limits on 24 services that a bankruptcy petition preparer ("Petition Preparer") may perform. The court focused exclusively on the issue of the value of Plotnick's permissible services.

25 Plotnick does not contend that the debtor or the estate 26 might have employed her as a professional under § 327 given the 27 relatively unique status that Arizona grants to CLDPs. Further, 28 she concedes that she cannot receive compensation for services that § 110 prohibits her from performing. As a result, any services that she might have performed beyond those authorized by § 110 are not part of the issues on this appeal.

1 for assistance in filing bankruptcy in Arizona. According to 2 Plotnick, Hill paid Potier $3,000 to prepare paperwork for a 3 California bankruptcy filing that never was filed.

4 Plotnick then summarily described the services that she 5 provided to Hill: "I obtained the information I needed from Ms.
6 Potier and Mrs. Hill to complete the paperwork and the petition 7 was ready for filing in one week, my routine turnaround time for 8 completion." Response (July 28, 2010), at p. 1. Absent from 9 Plotnick's summary description was any detail on how she obtained 10 the information from Hill and Potier, or what steps were needed 11 to input that information into the appropriate forms.⁵

12 Plotnick next set forth her relevant work experience and 13 training. Plotnick's credentials admittedly were well-suited for 14 providing assistance in the preparation of bankruptcy petitions 15 and schedules. According to Plotnick, she had, in total, 35 16 years of bankruptcy-related experience, including serving as a 17 clerk and secretary to a bankruptcy judge, working as a senior 18

19 ⁵Later on in her response, Plotnick itemized the time she 20 spent assisting Hill. This itemization provides a bit more information regarding Plotnick's services:

21	Calls from/to Hill's California attorney	1.3
22	Emails from/to Hill's California attorney	1.0
23	Calls to/from Mrs. Hill	1.5
24	Emails to/from Mrs. Hill	1.0
25	Type bankruptcy petition, schedules, [etc.]	3.0
26	Meet with Mrs. Hill to review accuracy [etc.]	.8
	Total Hours Expended	8.4 [sic]

27 Response (July 28, 2010), at pp. 5-6. Even though mathematically 28 incorrect, we will use this 8.4 hour number so as to correspond to the arguments made in Plotnick's brief.

1 bankruptcy paralegal for an Arizona law firm, and providing 2 contract paralegal services to other attorneys, banks and 3 businesses. Plotnick also stated that she had been preparing 4 bankruptcy documents for the public for the past 20 years, and 5 that she had an unblemished reputation with the bankruptcy court 6 and the office of the United States Trustee.

7 Plotnick also detailed how her expenses in serving as a CLDP
8 in bankruptcy-related matters have increased over time. Plotnick 9 figured that the costs of supplies and fees that she must pay 10 have increased over the last several years by an aggregate amount 11 of $1,000. According to Plotnick, there was no way for her to 12 recoup these increased expenses, except by charging more for her 13 document preparation services.

14 Most of the rest of Plotnick's response was devoted to why 15 she believes the court's $200 "standard fee" (as referred to in 16 the OSC) was unfair and unreasonably low. In essence, Plotnick 17 argued that, when compared to the fees and fee increases that the 18 bankruptcy court has allowed for bankruptcy attorneys, the $200 19 standard fee allowed for bankruptcy petition preparers was 20 ridiculously small. Plotnick's reckoning of what bankruptcy 21 attorneys charge was based upon her experience working for, with, 22 and around them. Based on her prior law firm experience, 23 Plotnick gave detailed figures and calculations concerning what 24 law firms charged for attorney and paralegal time related to 25 preparing and filing bankruptcy petitions.

26 Plotnick further asserted that the court's $200 standard fee 27 had to be increased to ensure that she could recoup the expense 28 increases that she had encountered over the last several years.

1 She principally based this assertion on her perception of what 2 was fair, especially in light of what attorneys were allowed to 3 charge for their services and the services of their employees.
4 Plotnick's response contained little or no analysis comparing the 5 nature and extent of attorney services to document preparer 6 services.

7 Importantly, Plotnick's response contained no evidence in 8 the form of affidavits or declarations in support of her 9 position. Further, the sole unauthenticated exhibit she 10 presented with her response - the email testimonials of three of 11 her clients - had little bearing on the controlling issue under 12 § 110: the reasonable value of her services to Hill.

13 Plotnick cited two Arizona bankruptcy court decisions: In re 14 Thueson, No. 4:08-bk-10121, 2009 WL 1076888 (Bankr. D. Ariz.
15 March 12, 2009);⁶ and In re Kassa, 198 B.R. 790 (Bankr. D. Ariz.
16 1996). She criticized these decisions as wrongly decided. Her 17 concerns boil down to four grounds:

- 18 1. Thueson and Kassa erroneously decided that the maximum 19 reasonable fee a Petition Preparer may charge in an 20 Arizona bankruptcy is $200.
- 21 2. Thueson's and Kassa's reliance on legal secretary 22 salaries in determining a presumptively reasonable fee 23 was misplaced; the court should have, instead, looked 24 at the rate attorneys charge their clients for 25 paralegal services.

26
27 ⁶While Thueson is an unpublished decision it is quite 28 relevant here because the bankruptcy court expressly adopted its reasoning in ruling on the reasonableness of Plotnick's fees.

1 3. Unlike legal secretaries, CLDPs are required by Arizona 2 law to meet certain minimum ethical, educational and 3 experiential requirements that make their services more 4 valuable than legal secretary services.

5 4. It was "fundamentally unfair" for the court to sua 6 sponte raise and consider the reasonableness of her 7 Petition Preparer fee.

8 Response (July 28, 2010), at pp. 3-4. Most of the rest of 9 Plotnick's Response addressed the public benefit that Arizona 10 derives from CLDPs.

11 On August 2, 2010, the court held a hearing on its OSC and 12 Plotnick's response. Significantly, Plotnick did not ask either 13 at the hearing or in her response for an opportunity to submit 14 evidence or to call witnesses to testify. The court and Plotnick 15 engaged in a colloquy during which Plotnick made essentially the 16 same points she had asserted in her brief, and the court made 17 essentially the same points it had set forth in Kassa and 18 Thueson. Ultimately, the court concluded that Plotnick had not 19 established her entitlement to any fees in excess of $200. It 20 thus entered an order directing Plotnick to turn over the excess 21 $50 that she had received from Hill to the chapter 7 trustee.

22 Plotnick timely appealed.

23 JURISDICTION

24 The bankruptcy court had jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.
25 §§ 1334 and 157(b) (2) (A). We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.
26 § 158.

27 ISSUE

28 Did the bankruptcy court abuse its discretion when it

1 disallowed $50 of Plotnick's $250 Petition Preparer fee?

2 STANDARD OF REVIEW

3 We review a bankruptcy court's order regarding the allowance
4 of fees for abuse of discretion. Law Offices of David A. Boone 5 v. Derham-Burk (In re Eliapo), 468 F.3d 592, 596 (9th Cir. 2006).

6 Under the abuse of discretion standard of review, we first 7 "determine de novo whether the [bankruptcy] court identified the 8 correct legal rule to apply to the relief requested." United 9 States v. Hinkson, 585 F.3d 1247, 1262 (9th Cir. 2009) (en banc).
10 And if the bankruptcy court identified the correct legal rule, we 11 then determine under the clearly erroneous standard whether its 12 factual findings and its application of the facts to the relevant 13 law were: "(1) illogical, (2) implausible, or (3) without support 14 in inferences that may be drawn from the facts in the record."
15 Id. (internal quotation marks omitted).

16 DISCUSSION

17 To provide context, we first will briefly outline Arizona 18 law and bankruptcy law regulating the activities of document 19 preparers. Then we will turn our attention to the specifics of 20 this case.

21 1. Relevant legal principles.

22 The Supreme Court of Arizona promulgates rules that govern 23 the practice of law in Arizona (the "Ariz. S. Ct. Rules"). Only 24 active members of the Arizona bar, and those who qualify as 25 exempt, may practice law in Arizona. See Ariz. S. Ct. Rule 26 31(b). The Arizona Supreme Court has defined the "practice of 27 law" to include, among other things, preparing documents which:
28 (1) affect legal rights or (2) are meant for filing in any court,

1 administrative agency or tribunal. See Ariz. S. Ct. Rule 31(a);
2 see also In re Bankruptcy Petition Preparers Who Are Not 3 Certified Pursuant to Requirements of the Ariz. Supreme Court,
4 307 B.R. 134, 141 (9th Cir. BAP 2004) (hereinafter, "BPP") 5 (identifying other jurisdictions that have characterized similar 6 services as the practice of law).

7 The Arizona Supreme court has designated a number of 8 exemptions that permit non-attorneys to engage in activities that 9 might otherwise constitute the practice law in certain 10 circumstances. In particular, "certified legal document 11 preparers" are permitted to perform services as set forth in 12 Arizona's Code of Judicial Administration (hereinafter, "ACJA")
13 § 7-208. See Ariz. S. Ct. Rule 31(d)(24). In turn, the ACJA 14 delineates the specific services that CLDPs are authorized to 15 perform.⁷

16 17 ⁷The ACJA Provides:

18 1. Authorized Services. A certified legal document 19 preparer is authorized to:

20 a. Prepare or provide legal documents, without the 21 supervision of an attorney, for an entity or a member 22 of the public in any legal matter when that entity or person is not represented by an attorney;

23 b. Provide general legal information, but may not 24 provide any kind of specific advice, opinion, or 25 recommendation to a consumer about possible legal rights, remedies, defenses, options, or strategies;

26 c. Provide general factual information pertaining 27 to legal rights, procedures, or options available to a 28 person in a legal matter when that person is not represented by an attorney;

1 At the same time, § 110 governs the activities of non-2 attorney document preparers when they assist pro se debtors in 3 preparing papers for filing in bankruptcy cases. Several courts 4 already have published excellent recapitulations of the history
5 leading up to the enactment of § 110, and we need not recount 6 them here. See, e.g., In re Guttierrez, 248 B.R. 287, 292 (Bankr.
7 W.D. Tex. 2000); In re Farness, 244 B.R. 464, 466-67 (Bankr. D.
8 Idaho 2000). For our purposes, it suffices for us to say that 9 Congress enacted § 110 in 1994, and amended it in 2005, in 10 response to its perception that large-scale “bankruptcy mills” 11 and other unscrupulous document preparers were abusing the 12 bankruptcy system, by causing debtors to file grossly inaccurate 13 and incomplete bankruptcy petitions and schedules, sometimes 14 without the debtors even being aware that they had filed for 15 bankruptcy. See 248 B.R. at 292.

16 Unlike the Arizona Rules, which allow CLDPs to perform a 17 limited range of simple legal tasks without attorney involvement, 18 § 110 restricts the activities of Petition Preparers to “‘the 19 modest service of transcribing or typing bankruptcy forms that 20 the debtors alone must prepare without assistance’ and ‘other 21 sorts of services . . . can perform not be compensated.’” Scott

23 ⁷(...continued)

24 d. Make legal forms and documents available to a 25 person who is not represented by an attorney; and 26 e. File and arrange for service of legal forms and 27 documents for a person in a legal matter when that 28 person is not represented by an attorney.

See ACJA § 7-208(F).

1 v. U.S. Trustee (In re Doser), (hereinafter, "Doser I"), 412 F.3d
2 1056, 1065 (9th Cir. 2005) (quoting In re Bush, 275 B.R. 69, 84
3 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2002)) (emphasis in original); see also BPP, 307 4 B.R. at 143 (referencing § 110's legislative history, which 5 states that "it is permissible for a [Petition Preparer] to 6 provide services solely limited to typing").

7 In one respect, Arizona law might be read as being more 8 restrictive than § 110. Under one construction of Arizona law, 9 CLDPs are the only non-attorneys who may assist a pro se in 10 preparing legal documents for filing in court - even if that 11 assistance is limited to mere typing services.⁸ For the apparent 12 purpose of preventing Petition Preparers in Arizona from engaging 13 in the unauthorized practice of law, the Arizona bankruptcy court 14 has promulgated a local rule providing that only CLDPs may act as 15 Petition Preparers in the Arizona bankruptcy court. See Bankr.
16 D. Ariz. Local R. 2090-2(a). This local rule carries out the 17 plainly-expressed intent of § 110(k), which provides that nothing 18 in § 110 is intended to permit the unauthorized practice of law 19 as defined by each state. See BPP, 307 B.R. at 142-43 (upholding 20 enforcement of the Arizona bankruptcy court's General Order no.
21 89, which was the precursor to Bankr. D. Ariz. Local R. 2090-22 2(a)).

23 2. Examination of Petition Preparer fees generally.

24 The bankruptcy court must disallow a Petition Preparer fee

26 ⁸But see BPP, 307 B.R. at 141-42 & n.7 (declining to decide 27 whether Arizona law permits preparers who are not CLDPs to 28 provide mere "secretarial services" in relation to documents to be filed in court).

1 to the extent the court finds that the fee exceeds the value of 2 the Petition Preparer's services. See § 110(h)(3). Either a 3 party in interest by motion, or the court on its own initiative, 4 may question the reasonableness of a Petition Preparer's fees.
5 See § 110(h)(4).⁹

6 When the court or a party in interest questions the Petition 7 Preparer's fee, the Petition Preparer must establish the value of 8 her services. Hastings v. U.S. Trustee (In re Agyekum), 225 B.R.
9 695, 699 (9th Cir. BAP 1998) (citing § 329 and In re Agnew, 144 10 F.3d 1013 (7th Cir. 1998)). In other words, once the 11 reasonableness of the Petition Preparer's fee has been raised, 12 the Petition Preparer bears the burden of proof to establish the 13 reasonableness of the fee. See In re Doser, 281 B.R. 292, 313
14 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2002) (hereinafter, "Doser II"), aff'd, 292 B.R.
15 652 (D. Idaho 2003), aff'd, Doser I, 412 F.3d 1056 (9th Cir 2005)
16 (citing In re Bush, 275 B.R. at 85-86; and, In re Geraci, 138 17 F.3d 314, 318 (7th Cir. 1998)).

18 Many courts, however, have established "presumptively-19 reasonable fees" for Petition Preparers and for attorneys. See 20 Doser II, 281 B.R. at 316 n.24 (listing Petition Preparer cases); 21 Eliapo, 468 F.3d at 599-600 (listing attorney cases). If the 22 Petition Preparer charges a fee at or below the presumptively-23 reasonable amount, and no one objects, the court ordinarily will 24

25 ⁹The court's express authority to sua sponte examine the 26 reasonableness of a Petition Preparer fee was added to § 110 by 27 the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 28 2005, Pub. L. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23, and was clarified by the Bankruptcy Technical Corrections Act of 2010, Pub. L. 111-327, 124 Stat. 3557.

1 not require proof of the reasonableness of the fee charged in a 2 particular case, but rather will accept the fee as reasonable on 3 its face. To the extent the Petition Preparer seeks compensation 4 over and above the presumptively-reasonable fee, the Petition 5 Preparer must prove that its services are worth more. Agyekum, 6 225 B.R. at 699; see also Eliapo 468 F.3d at 598-600 (approving 7 the presumptive fee procedure in the examination of attorney 8 fees).

9 3. Examination of Plotnick's Petition Preparer fee.

10 Plotnick here presented no admissible, relevant evidence in 11 support of her arguments that she was entitled to a $250 fee in 12 this case. We can affirm on this basis alone. Briefs and oral 13 argument do not constitute evidence. Sicherman v. Cohara (In re 14 Cohara), 324 B.R. 24, 28 (6th Cir. BAP 2005); see also British 15 Airways Bd. v. Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 952 (9th Cir. 1978) 16 ("legal memoranda and oral argument are not evidence, and they 17 cannot by themselves create a factual dispute sufficient to 18 defeat a summary judgment motion"). While we often give pro se 19 litigants leeway, we cannot credit as evidence unsubstantiated 20 statements made by the litigant in court filings or in open court 21 without at least some sort of oath or affirmation regarding the 22 truth of the matters asserted. See Winterrowd v. Nelson, 480
23 F.3d 1181, 1183 n.3 (9th Cir. 2007); Lang v. Lang (In re Lang), 24 293 B.R. 501, 512-13 (10th Cir. BAP 2003).¹⁰

26 ¹⁰Even if we were to credit Plotnick's unsubstantiated 27 statements as evidence, she still did not establish the 28 reasonableness of her $250 fee. This will become clear from our

1 Confronted with a lack of evidence, the bankruptcy court 2 properly concluded that Plotnick had not established her 3 entitlement to more than the standard fee of $200. Alternately, 4 the court accepted at face value Plotnick's representation that 5 she was entitled to compensation for the 8.4 hours she spent 6 assisting Hill; however, when the court multiplied 8.4 hours by a 7 presumptively-reasonable hourly rate of $23 per hour (based on 8 Kassa and Thueson), the court determined that Plotnick still was 9 not entitled to more than the standard fee of $200.

10 4. Kassa and Thueson.

11 Although we could and do affirm the bankruptcy court's 12 decision based upon Plotnick's lack of evidence to support her 13 claim for relief, we also canvass her legal contentions as they 14 do not lead to reversal and are likely to recur. Before 15 reviewing these contentions, however, an examination of Kassa and 16 Thueson is appropriate.

17 In Kassa, the Arizona bankruptcy court held that, because 18 Petition Preparers could do no more than type or transcribe for 19 debtors, the most-appropriate reference point for determining a 20 presumptively-reasonable Petition Preparer fee was the 21 compensation earned by legal secretaries. 198 B.R. at 791.
22 Based on its general knowledge of legal secretary salaries in 23 Arizona, Kassa broke down a $35,000 annual secretarial salary to 24 an hourly rate of $16.82. "(35,000 divided by 52 = $673.07 per 25 week divided by 40 hours per week = $16.82)." Id. at 792. The

26
27

¹⁰ (...continued)
28 discussion of her arguments, infra.

1 court then multiplied the $16.82 hourly rate by 12 hours (the 2 court's estimation of how long it generally took to type the 3 forms for a standard bankruptcy filing) to come up with a 4 standard Petition Preparer fee of approximately $200. Id.

5 According to Thueson, Kassa was the source of the Arizona 6 bankruptcy court's standard Petition Preparer fee of $200, and 7 the $200 standard fee had been in place during the intervening 14 8 years. Thueson set out to consider whether circumstances had 9 changed to the point where the $200 standard fee was no longer 10 reasonable. In essence, Thueson determined that, due to 11 inflation, the benchmark hourly rate needed to rise from $16.82 12 to $23.00, but that the increased hourly rate was more than 13 offset by a decrease in the amount of time it took to type the 14 forms for a standard bankruptcy filing. 2009 WL 1076888, at  15 14-15. Thueson recounted the three days of testimony it had 16 heard in the seventeen Petition Preparer fee cases it had 17 consolidated for hearing. Id. at 1-7. The evidence tended to 18 show that the average amount of labor it took to prepare a 19 standard bankruptcy filing was roughly five hours. Id. at *14.
20 According to Thueson, even though this evidence might have 21 supported the setting of a new standard Petition Preparer fee of 22 less than $200, Thueson ultimately decided to leave the standard 23 $200 fee in place. Id. at *16.

24 5. Plotnick's arguments on appeal.

25 We will now turn our attention to Plotnick's legal arguments 26 on appeal and why none of them justify reversal of the bankruptcy 27 court's order. Plotnick essentially makes the same arguments on 28 appeal that she made to the bankruptcy court. Plotnick primarily

1 complained that the court's $200 standard fee was "outdated," 2 "unreasonably low," and did "not bear a rational relationship to 3 the cost of obtaining similar services from an attorney." 4 Appellant's Opening Brief (November 8, 2010), at p. 4. We will 5 consider each of these contentions in turn, but first we will 6 address Plotnick's contention that the manner in which the 7 hearing was held violated her due process rights.

8 Plotnick did not assert in either the bankruptcy court or in 9 her appeal brief that she had been denied due process. However, 10 at oral argument before us, she suggested that the bankruptcy 11 court did not give her the opportunity to tell her side of the 12 story, essentially a claim that she had been denied due process 13 of law.

14 In bankruptcy cases, adequate notice and adequate 15 opportunity for hearing generally are flexible concepts that 16 depend upon the circumstances of the particular case. See 17 § 102(1)(A).¹¹ This flexible approach to determining adequate 18

19 ¹¹Section 102(1) provides:

20 (1) "after notice and a hearing", or a similar phrase-

21 (A) means after such notice as is appropriate in 22 the particular circumstances, and such opportunity 23 for a hearing as is appropriate in the particular 24 circumstances; but

25 (B) authorizes an act without an actual hearing if such notice is given properly and if--

26 (i) such a hearing is not requested timely by 27 a party in interest; or

28 (continued...)

1 notice and opportunity for hearing is consistent with the 2 dictates of due process:

3 [a]n elementary and fundamental requirement of due 4 process in any proceeding which is to be accorded 5 finality is notice reasonably calculated, under all the 6 circumstances, to apprise interested parties of the 7 pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity 8 to present their objections. The notice must be of 9 such nature as reasonably to convey the required 10 information and it must afford a reasonable time for 11 those interested to make their appearance.

8 Mullane v. Cent. Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 314
9 (1950) (citations omitted); see also Mathews v. Eldridge, 424
10 U.S. 319, 333 (1976) ("The fundamental requirement of due process 11 is the opportunity to be heard at a meaningful time and in a 12 meaningful manner."); Memphis Light, Gas & Water Div. v. Craft, 13 436 U.S. 1, 14 (1978) ("The purpose of notice under the Due 14 Process Clause is to apprise the affected individual of, and 15 permit adequate preparation for, an impending hearing."). In 16 other words, we must determine whether the notice and opportunity 17 for hearing given to Plotnick was "reasonably calculated" to give 18 her a meaningful opportunity to respond to the OSC.

19 Here, the bankruptcy court issued its OSC on July 7, 2010, 20 26 days before the August 2, 2010 hearing on the OSC. Plotnick 21 submitted her written response to the OSC 21 days after issuance 22 of the OSC, and Plotnick appeared at the August 2, 2010 hearing 23 and argued on her own behalf. At no time did Plotnick ask for a 24 continuance of the August 2, 2010 hearing.

26 ¹¹(...continued)

27 (ii) there is insufficient time for a hearing 28 to be commenced before such act must be done, and the court authorizes such act

1 During oral argument before us, Plotnick intimated that the 2 bankruptcy court did not really give her a chance to argue, but 3 the transcript from the August 2, 2010 hearing tells a different 4 story. The hearing transcript reflects that the court and 5 Plotnick engaged in a lengthy colloquy during which Plotnick 6 reiterated most of the same points that she made in her written 7 response. Tellingly, her appellate brief did not assert any new 8 or different arguments.

9 Moreover, as stated before, the record establishes that 10 Plotnick never attempted to submit evidence, nor did she request 11 an evidentiary hearing. The local bankruptcy rules for the 12 District of Arizona contain a procedure for making a request for 13 an evidentiary hearing. Bankr. D. Ariz. Local R. 9014-2(a) 14 provides that hearings scheduled in contested matters, such as a 15 hearing on a disputed fee, "will be conducted without live 16 testimony except as otherwise ordered by the court." Local R.
17 9014-2(b) provides that a party may request an evidentiary 18 hearing by submission of a separate motion, detailing the time 19 required for receipt of evidence, when the parties will be ready 20 to present the evidence, time required for discovery, and whether 21 a Rule 7016 scheduling conference is required.¹²

22 _____
23 ¹²The relevant portion of Bankr. D. Ariz. Local R. 9014-2 states:

24 (a) Initial Hearing without Live Testimony. Pursuant 25 to Bankruptcy Rule 9014(e), all hearings scheduled on 26 contested matters will be conducted without live 27 testimony except as otherwise ordered by the court.
If, at such hearing, the court determines that there is 28 a material factual dispute, the court will schedule a

1 In this case, Plotnick did not file any written request for 2 an evidentiary hearing. In fact, she never even suggested that 3 one was necessary. In light of all of the above circumstances, 4 we cannot perceive any violation to Plotnick's due process 5 rights.

6 Plotnick also argued that the $200 standard fee is outdated.
7 It apparently is true that the court has used the same standard 8 fee for roughly fifteen years, but Thueson demonstrates that the 9 court methodically considered the continued propriety of the $200 10 standard fee less than two years ago and, after hearing three 11 days of testimony and taking into account the effects of 12

13 ¹²(...continued)

14 continued hearing at which live testimony will be 15 admitted.

16 (b) Request for Live Testimony.

17 (1) Any party filing a motion, application, or 18 objection who reasonably anticipates that its 19 resolution will require live testimony may file an 20 accompanying motion for an evidentiary hearing, 21 stating:

22 (A) The estimated time required for receipt 23 of all evidence, including live testimony;

24 (B) When the parties will be ready to present 25 such evidence;

26 (C) The estimated time required to complete 27 all formal and informal discovery;

28 (D) Whether a Bankruptcy Rule 7016 Scheduling Conference should be held; and,

(E) Whether any party who may participate at the evidentiary hearing is appearing pro se.

1 inflation, determined that the $200 standard fee still was 2 appropriate. Bankruptcy courts are given broad discretion in 3 setting presumptively-reasonable fees, see Agyekum, 225 B.R. at 4 699, and Plotnick has not established either (1) how the 5 bankruptcy court abused its discretion in setting its 6 presumptively-reasonable fee, or (2) how she has been harmed by 7 the presumptively-reasonable fee.

8 Plotnick's arguments against and references to the $200 9 standard fee reflect a misunderstanding as to how the standard 10 fee works. Plotnick at times referred to the standard fee as a 11 cap or as the maximum fee that a Petition Preparer can receive, 12 but that simply is not so. As a presumptively-reasonable fee, 13 the standard fee does not preclude Plotnick or any other Petition 14 Preparer from claiming and proving entitlement to a higher fee.
15 See Eliapo, 468 F.3d 601; Agyekum, 225 B.R. at 699.

16 In fact, the bankruptcy court's application here of its $200 17 standard fee (and its $23 standard hourly rate) worked more like 18 a floor than a ceiling. The bankruptcy court accepted at face 19 value that the entire 8.4 hours Plotnick claimed for helping Hill 20 was compensable under § 110, but lacking any evidence 21 demonstrating the value to the debtor of Plotnick's time, the 22 bankruptcy court utilized its $23 hourly rate from Thueson. When 23 it multiplied the 8.4 hours by the $23 hourly rate, the 24 bankruptcy court determined that Plotnick still was better off 25 with the $200 standard fee, and that is what the bankruptcy court 26
27
28

1 allowed Plotnick to keep.¹³

2 Plotnick next argued that the $200 standard fee is 3 unreasonably low in light of the costs and cost increases that 4 she has incurred in providing her services. She states that her 5 annual costs have increased by as much as $1000 over the last 6 several years, while the standard Petition Preparer fee has 7 remained unchanged, and that the standard fee should rise to 8 allow her to recoup at least part of these additional costs when 9 she serves as a Petition Preparer.

10 However, as Thueson pointed out, Congress has charged us 11 with protecting debtors from excessive fees and has not charged 12 us with ensuring a particular rate of return for Petition 13 Preparer services. Indeed, we considered and rejected a similar 14 argument regarding Petition Preparer costs in Agyekum, 225 B.R.
15 at 700. Simply put, Plotnick did not need to establish what it 16 cost her to provide Petition Preparer services, but rather what 17 those services objectively were worth to Hill as a debtor.

18 Plotnick further argued that the standard fee should bear 19 some rational relationship to fees attorneys and/or law firm 20 paralegals charge for their bankruptcy filing services. We, 21 again, disagree. We perceive little nexus between the typing 22 services that § 110 allows and the package of obligations and 23 protections that, by law, necessarily accompany bankruptcy

24 _____

25 ¹³It likely would have been inappropriate for the court to 26 have allowed anything less than $200 here. The OSC merely raised 27 the issue of whether Plotnick should disgorge anything in excess 28 of $200. Thus, Plotnick's due process rights arguably would have been implicated if the bankruptcy court ultimately had required Plotnick to disgorge more than $50 of her $250 fee.

1 filings undertaken by attorneys and their paralegals. Put 2 another way, whenever an attorney or an attorney's paralegal 3 files a bankruptcy petition for a client, a host of legal, 4 ethical, fiduciary and professional obligations apply to that 5 attorney-client relationship - obligations that a Petition 6 Preparer, as a mere typist, simply does not bear. In short, 7 Plotnick has not established any factual basis for linking 8 Petition Preparer compensation to attorney or law firm paralegal 9 compensation.

10 Plotnick's appeal brief raised several other concerns.
11 Plotnick contended that it was unfair for the court to sua sponte 12 question the reasonableness of her Petition Preparer fee. To the 13 extent Plotnick is questioning the court's authority, § 110 14 expressly provides that the court on its own initiative may raise 15 the issue of the reasonableness of the Petition Preparer fee.
16 See § 110(h)(4).¹⁴ To the extent Plotnick was attempting to 17 raise a due process issue, as we already determined above, we 18 perceive none here. The court raised the fee question by issuing 19 its OSC. Plotnick filed a response to the OSC and appeared and 20 argued on her own behalf at a noticed hearing on the OSC. At no 21 time did Plotnick ever express a desire for a continued or 22 additional hearing, or for additional time to collect and present 23 evidence. Under these circumstances, we simply see no grounds to 24 support a due process claim. See BPP, 307 B.R. 143-44 (rejecting

25
26
27
28 ¹⁴See also note 8, supra.

1 due process claim under similar circumstances).¹⁵

2 Finally, Plotnick complained that the standard fee did not 3 take into account her CLDP status and her excellent credentials.
4 No one disputes that Plotnick's bankruptcy law background makes 5 her an excellent candidate to serve as a Petition Preparer.
6 However, § 110 in essence precludes allowance of greater 7 compensation based on superior credentials. Doser II explained 8 why this is so:

9 [I]t must be remembered, that other than ensuring that 10 the information provided by the customer is properly 11 transcribed onto correct forms, the BPP plays no 12 additional compensable role in the process of the 13 customer's filing for bankruptcy.

12 Doser II, 281 B.R. at 315.¹⁶

13 Plotnick's (and her colleagues') frustration is palpable 14 with a system that generally requires all legal work to be 15

16 ¹⁵Plotnick also asserted that the court's $200 standard fee 17 has not been recently posted or published by either the U.S.
18 Trustee or by the court. We are unclear as to the legal point 19 raised by this assertion, even if it had been supported by 20 admissible evidence. Even if we assume that the fee policy has 21 not been recently posted or published, Plotnick admitted in her 22 papers and in court that she has long been aware of the standard 23 fee. Consequently, the asserted absence of recent posting or 24 publication of the standard fee policy does not suggest any 25 grounds for reversal of the order on appeal.

23 ¹⁶Plotnick pointed out that, by way of Bankr. D. Ariz. Local 24 R. 2090-2(a), the Arizona bankruptcy court requires that all 25 Petition Preparers qualify as CLDPs before they can help prepare 26 bankruptcy papers for filing. Plotnick argues that, if Arizona 27 Petition Preparers must be CLDPs, then her CLDP status must add 28 value to her Petition Preparer services. However, nothing that Plotnick has provided in the record quantifies the value of her CLDP status when she acts as a Petition Preparer. Without such quantification, she has not established her entitlement to a larger fee.

1 performed by licensed attorneys. She obviously and sincerely 2 believes that CLDPs like her are competent to provide services to 3 debtors at a more sophisticated level than § 110 seems to allow.
4 But we must interpret the laws as they are written, and not as 5 Plotnick believes they should be. See Bush, 275 B.R. at 77. If 6 Plotnick and her colleagues desire to change the existing system, 7 they must seek that change from Congress and not the courts.

8 CONCLUSION

9 For the reasons set forth above, the order of the bankruptcy
10 court is AFFIRMED.
