Appeal from the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of California

Honorable Edward D. Jellen, Bankruptcy Judge, Presiding

Before: BAUM,¹ DUNN and JURY, Bankruptcy Judges.

1 Hon. Redfield T. Baum, Sr., Bankruptcy Judge for the District of Arizona, sitting by designation.

1 BAUM, Bankruptcy Judge:

3 Appellant, California Franchise Tax Board ("FTB"), appeals 4 the bankruptcy court's "Decision: Motion For Order Determining 5 That Tax Liability Is Excepted From Discharge" and accompanying 6 "Order Denying Motion For Order Determining That Tax Liability Is 7 Excepted From Discharge" (together "Decision"). We AFFIRM.

8 I. FACTS

9 The facts are not in dispute. The parties' stipulated facts 10 are: On July 22, 2002, Brenda Marie Jones ("Jones" or 11 "Debtor") and her former spouse filed a petition for relief under 12 Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code² (the "Prior Case"). The 13 bankruptcy court entered a confirmation order in the Prior Case 14 on September 12, 2002. While the Prior Case was pending, Jones 15 and her former spouse filed their 2002 California income tax 16 return on October 15, 2003. That return was filed timely based 17 on an extension, however, no tax payment was remitted. On 18 September 22, 2006, the Prior Case was dismissed.

19 On October 5, 2007, Jones filed the present petition for 20 relief under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code. Jones received 21 her Chapter 7 discharge on January 2, 2008, and the case was

24 ² Unless otherwise indicated, all "Code," chapter, and section 25 references are to the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101-1532, and 26 all rule references are to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy 27 Procedure, Rules 1001-9037, as enacted and promulgated as of October 17, 2005, the effective date of most of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 ("BAPCPA"), Pub. L. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23.

1 closed. On March 12, 2009, the FTB obtained an order reopening 2 the present case in order to file its motion to determine if the 3 2002 California income tax was excepted from Debtor's discharge.
4 Following a hearing, the Bankruptcy Court on April 8, 2009, 5 entered its Decision which denied the FTB's motion and held that 6 the tax debt was discharged. The FTB appeals.

7 II. JURISDICTION

8 The bankruptcy court had jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
9 §§ 1334 and 157(b)(2)(I). This Court has jurisdiction under 10 28 U.S.C. § 158(a)(1) and (b)(1).

11 III. ISSUE

12 Whether the bankruptcy court erred when it held that a 13 confirmed Chapter 13 plan in Debtor's Prior Case did not toll the 14 three-year lookback period of Section 507(a)(8) for a post-15 petition tax.

16 IV. STANDARD OF REVIEW

17 No questions of fact are at issue in this appeal; at issue 18 are the bankruptcy court's legal conclusions. We review the 19 bankruptcy court's interpretation of the Bankruptcy Code de novo.
20 Bankr. Receivables Mgmt. v. Lopez (In re Lopez), 345 F.3d 701, 705
21 (9th Cir. 2003).

22 V. DISCUSSION

23 A. The unnumbered paragraph added at the end of Section 507(a)(8)
24 by BAPCPA does not suspend or toll the three-year lookback period 25 for a post-petition tax.

26 Section 507(a)(8)(A)(i) provides for priority treatment of 27 unsecured income taxes if the date the return was required to be 28

1 filed is within three years before the petition date.³ The three 2 year period is known as the "three-year lookback period." By 3 definition, a post-petition tax (such as the 2002 California 4 income tax at issue here) cannot fall within the "three-year 5 lookback period."

6 Priority income taxes are non-dischargeable in a Chapter 7 7 (and also non-dischargeable for a hardship discharge under 8 Chapter 13). See Section 523(a)(1)(A). Priority taxes provided 9 for in a Chapter 13 plan must be fully paid in order to receive a 10 discharge. See Sections 1322(a)(2) and 1328.

11 In 2005, BAPCPA added an unnumbered paragraph at the end of 12 Section 507(a)(8) that provides for suspension of the priority 13 time periods under certain conditions, including "any time during 14 which the stay of proceedings was in effect in a prior case . . .
15 plus 90 days."⁴ The unnumbered paragraph begins "an otherwise 16 applicable time period specified in this paragraph," making it 17 clear that it is the priority time period contained in Section 18 507(a)(8) that can be suspended. We interpret the phrase "an

19 20 ³ Section 507(a)(8)(A)(i) provides, in relevant part, priority 21 status for unsecured income taxes that are "for a taxable year 22 ending on or before the date of the filing of the petition" and 23 "for which a return, if required, is last due, including extensions, after three years before the date of the filing of the petition."

24 ⁴ The unnumbered paragraph at the end of Section 25 507(a)(8) provides, in relevant part, "An otherwise applicable 26 time period specified in this paragraph shall be suspended for 27 any period during which a governmental unit is prohibited under 28 applicable nonbankruptcy law from collecting a tax as a result of . . . any time during which the stay of proceedings was in effect in a prior case . . . or during which collection was precluded by the existence of 1 or more confirmed plans . . . plus 90 days."

1 otherwise applicable time period" to mean that the tax year at 2 issue falls within the three-year lookback period in a prior case 3 and the subject claim is for a priority tax. The use of the word 4 "applicable"⁵ limits the tax to a pre-petition tax, because only a 5 tax for which the return is due to be filed during the subject 6 period may fall within the three-year lookback period under 7 Section 507(a)(8)(A)(i). An income tax obligation for which the 8 return is due post-petition (here, also post-confirmation) does 9 not meet the priority definition contained in Section 10 507(a)(8)(A)(i). A post-petition tax is not "capable or suitable" 11 to invoke priority status under Section 507(a)(8)(A)(i) and 12 therefore cannot fall within "an applicable time period" as 13 contemplated by the unnumbered paragraph.

14 The income tax at issue, for the 2002 tax year, was due 15 (based on an extension granted by the FTB) on October 15, 2003.
16 Debtor's Prior Case was filed on July 22, 2002. The three-year 17 lookback period in the Prior Case is July 22, 1999 to July 22, 18 2002. Thus, in the Prior Case, the 2002 income taxes would be 19 given priority status under Section 507(a)(8)(A)(i) only if the 20 return recognizing liability for such taxes was required to be 21 filed between July 22, 1999 and July 22, 2002. Since Debtor's 22 2002 income tax return was due on October 15, 2003, the 2002 23 income taxes did not fall within the three-year lookback period.

26 5 The Ninth Circuit recently defined "applicable" as used in 27 Section 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(I) as "capable or suitable for being 28 applied," citing Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary 60 (11th
ed. 2005). Ransom v. MBNA (In re Ransom), 577 F.3d 1026, 1031 (9th Cir. 2009).

1 Similarly, because the due date for Debtor's 2002 income tax 2 return did not fall within the three-year lookback period, it did 3 not fall within "an otherwise applicable time period," and 4 suspension is inappropriate under Section 507(a)(8)'s unnumbered 5 paragraph.⁶

6 B. The principle of equitable tolling expressed in Young v.
7 United States is not applicable.

8 According to the legislative history, the unnumbered 9 paragraph was added to codify the holding in Young v. United 10 States, 535 U.S. 43 (2002). In Young, the Supreme Court equitably 11 tolled the three-year lookback period during the pendency of a 12 prior bankruptcy. Young dealt with facts significantly different 13 from those before us. In Young, the debtors filed a Chapter 13 14 petition on May 1, 1996. The tax at issue, 1992 federal income 15 tax, was due on October 15, 1993, which was within the three-year 16 lookback period (May 1, 1993 - May 1, 1996). Id. at 44-45. The 17 Youngs moved to dismiss the Chapter 13 and filed a Chapter 7 on 18 March 12, 1997, one day before dismissal of the Chapter 13. The 19 back-to-back filings in Young were an attempt to run out the 20 three-year lookback period. The Young Court concluded that:

21 Tolling is in our view appropriate regardless of petitioners' 22 intentions when filing back-to-back Chapter 13 and Chapter 7 23 petitions—whether the Chapter 13 petition was filed in good 24 faith or solely to run down the lookback period. In either 25 case, the IRS was disabled from protecting its claim during 25 6 In the instant case, the 2002 taxes also do not fall within 26 the three-year lookback period and are thus not entitled to 27 priority status. The Chapter 7 was filed on October 5, 2007.

28 Three years prior thereto begins on October 5, 2004. The 2002 return was due on October 15, 2003, which is outside the three-year lookback period.

1 the pendency of the Chapter 13 petition, and this period of 2 disability tolled the three-year lookback period when the Youngs filed their Chapter 7 petition.

3 Id. at 50-51. Young found back-to-back petitions relevant in 4 determining that the IRS was disabled from protecting its claim.
5 Here, over a year passed between the dismissal of Jones'
6 Chapter 13 and the Chapter 7 filing.⁷

7 Young applied equitable tolling to pre-petition income taxes 8 that were required to be filed within the three-year lookback 9 period.⁸ In this case, the tax did not become due within the 10 three-year lookback period, and Jones did not file back-to-back 11 petitions. Young reasoned that the automatic stay disabled the 12 IRS from protecting its pre-petition tax claim during the pendency 13 of the prior Chapter 13. "The Youngs' Chapter 13 petition erected 14 an automatic stay under § 362, which prevented the IRS from taking 15 steps to protect its claim." Id. at 50. As discussed below, we 16 believe the FTB was not disabled from protecting its claim during 17 the pendency of Jones' prior Chapter 13 case.

18 Because our facts are significantly different from those in 19 Young, we conclude that equitable tolling, as applied in Young, is 20 inapplicable here.

21 C. The FTB was not disabled from protecting its post-confirmation 22 tax claim in the prior Chapter 13 case.

23 Notwithstanding our conclusion that the tax at issue does not 24

25 ⁷ There was no confirmed plan in Young and therefore no need to 26 discuss the extent of the Section 362 automatic stay as to property of the estate under Sections 1306 and 1327.

27 ⁸ 535 U.S. at 50 ("The Youngs' 1992 tax return was due within 28 that three-year period.").

1 fall within the three-year lookback period and is therefore not 2 subject to suspension, as to its priority status under the 3 unnumbered paragraph of Section 507(a)(8) or equitable tolling 4 under Young, we must still determine if the FTB was disabled from 5 protecting or collecting the tax during the pendency of Jones' 6 Chapter 13 case. If the FTB was disabled from collecting the 7 post-petition tax, then equitable tolling may be appropriate under 8 Section 105.⁹ (Although not raised by the FTB, under certain 9 circumstances, Section 108(c)¹⁰ has been used to toll a priority 10 determination for Section 507(a)(8) taxes.) To determine if the

12 9 Section 105(a) provides, in relevant part, that "The court 13 may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title."

14 10 The Ninth Circuit has tolled the priority tax period (under 15 what is now Section 507(a)(8)(A)(ii)) using Section 108(c) and 16 incorporating the tolling provision found in Section 6503 of the 17 Internal Revenue Code. See West v. United States (In re West), 18 5 F.3d 423, 427 (9th Cir. 1993). West adopted the reasoning of 19 Brickley v. United States (In re Brickley), 70 B.R. 113 (9th Cir.
BAP 1986). Both West and Brickley concerned tax returns that 20 were due prior to the filing of the first petition and neither 21 case decided the tolling issue in the context of a confirmed 22 plan.

23 At least one court within the Ninth Circuit has analyzed 24 West and Brickley in the context of a post-petition tax in the 25 prior case. See In re Cowen, 207 B.R. 207 (Bankr. E.D. Cal.
1997). Cowen also analyzed the effect of a confirmed plan on 26 estate property and reasoned that had the debtors put in their 27 Chapter 13 plan that estate property revested in the debtors under Section 1327 then "the IRS could have attempted to collect the taxes without violating the automatic stay." Id. at 211.

28 In Young, the Supreme Court noted that the courts are split over the issue of whether Section 108(c) contains a tolling provision, and declined to resolve the split. 535 U.S. at 52.
In any event, the FTB has not raised any Section 108(c) argument (requiring a specific tolling provision under California law), thus the issue is not before us.

1 FTB was disabled or barred from collecting the tax, we must 2 analyze what happens to estate property when a Chapter 13 plan is 3 confirmed.

4 1. Sections 362(a), 541 and 1306

5 Sections 362(a)(3) and (4) stay acts to obtain possession of, 6 exercise control over or create, perfect or enforce a lien against 7 property of the estate. Sections 362(a)(3) and (4) apply to post-8 petition claims. Section 541 defines property of the estate.
9 Section 1306 further defines property of the estate in Chapter 13 10 cases to include property defined in Section 541 and broadens the 11 definition to include property acquired and earnings earned after 12 the petition date but before the case is closed, dismissed or 13 converted.¹¹ Read together, and isolated from the other sections 14 of the Code, Sections 362(a) and 1306 appear to prevent a taxing 15 authority such as the FTB from collecting a post-confirmation debt 16 because collection would be against estate property and would 17 violate the automatic stay. Put another way, Section 1306 leaves 18 no non-estate property available to satisfy a post-petition debt.

19 2. Section 1327(b)

20 Section 1327(b) vests all estate property in the debtor upon 21 confirmation unless otherwise provided for in the plan or

22 23 11 Section 1306 provides, in relevant part, "(a) Property of 24 the estate includes, in addition to the property specified in 25 section 541 . . . all property . . . that the debtor acquires 26 after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted . . . and . . . earnings from services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted . . .

27 (b) Except as provided in a confirmed plan or order confirming a 28 plan, the debtor shall remain in possession of all property of the estate."

1 confirmation order.¹² Under this section unless the plan or 2 confirmation order provides otherwise, a post-petition creditor 3 could attempt post-confirmation collection without violating the 4 automatic stay because all estate property vests in the debtor at 5 confirmation.¹³

6 3. Split of Authority

7 When interpreting Sections 1306 and 1327, the courts have 8 split into four groups, with each having its own interpretation of 9 the combined meaning of Sections 1306 and 1327(b) on the automatic 10 stay as it applies to property in Chapter 13 cases. The courts 11 have acknowledged the conflict between these two sections and 12 noted that they are not models of clarity. The opinions range 13 from holding that all property of the estate remains so until the 14 case is closed, dismissed or converted, to holding that property 15 of the estate terminates upon confirmation. The Ninth Circuit has 16 not decided this issue.¹⁴ The four approaches are:

17 _____
18 12 Section 1327(b) provides "Except as otherwise provided in 19 the plan or order confirming the plan, the confirmation of a plan 20 vests all of the property of the estate in the debtor."

21 13 See Section 362(c)(1) (providing that the stay against 22 property of the estate under 362(a) continues until the property 23 is no longer property of the estate).

24 14 The parties cite to two Ninth Circuit cases that touch on 25 the issue before us: Nash v. Kester (In re Nash), 765 F.2d 1410 26 (9th Cir. 1985), and Hillis Motors, Inc. v. Hawaii Auto. Dealers' 27 Ass'n, 997 F.2d 581 (9th Cir. 1993). Although neither case is 28 directly on point, our holding here is supported by the general propositions in both cases.

In Nash a Chapter 13 trustee who was holding funds from a wage order disbursed those funds to a secured creditor after the case was dismissed. Nash at 1412. Debtor filed a second case the day after the dismissal and claimed the funds held by the trustee exempt under the Section 522(d)(5) wildcard. Id. The

1 A. "The estate preservation approach" - Property 2 of the estate exists until the case is closed, 3 dismissed or converted.

4 Under this approach, property 'vesting' in the debtor does 5 not mean that the estate no longer exists after plan confirmation.
6 No property is transferred from the estate. See Security Bank of 7 Marshalltown, Iowa v. Neiman, 1 F.3d 687, 690 (8th Cir. 1993) ("We 8 join the line of cases holding the estate continues to exist after 9 confirmation of the Chapter 13 plan. Upon reviewing § 1327 . . . , 10 even if property of the estate vests in the debtor at 11 confirmation, that does not necessarily mean that the estate no 12 longer exists."); Riddle v. Aneiro (In re Aneiro), 72 B.R. 424, 429
13 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1987):

14 The mere revesting of the property in the debtor upon 15 Chapter 13 plan confirmation does not convert property of the 16 estate into property of the debtor. Instead, the revested 17 property remains property of the estate subject to the terms 18 of the order of confirmation and all the protections of 19 § 362(a).

21 court stated that the money received before dismissal "was the 22 property of the estate because it was received after commencement 23 of the case but before dismissal." The court further stated, 24 "However, ownership over all of the property of the estate, 25 including the [funds disbursed by the trustee] vested in the 26 Nashes once the plan was confirmed. 11 U.S.C. § 1327(b)." Id.
27 at 1414. The court then further supported the ownership rationale 28 and cited to Section 349(b). Nash held that the trustee made an improper distribution. Id. at 1415.

29 Hillis concerned an antitrust suit in a Chapter 11 case.
30 Hawaii dissolved the debtor under State law while the case was 31 pending. The court found that the State exercised control over 32 corporate property when it dissolved the corporation and that 33 under Section 1141(b) (similar language as Section 1327(b)) 34 "confirmation . . . ordinarily lifts the automatic stay . . .
35 because confirmation usually terminates the existence of the 36 estate." Hillis at 587. In Hillis the court found an atypical 37 situation because the plan "unambiguously provides for the 38 continuation of the estate post-confirmation." Id. at 589.

1 "The estate preservation approach" line of cases rely on 2 Section 1306(a), and give little effect to Section 1327.

3 B. "The modified estate preservation approach" – 4 Existing estate property vests in the debtor at 5 confirmation, and estate property continues to 6 exist from post-petition income.

7 Under this approach, property obtained after confirmation is 8 estate property, subject to the Section 362(a) stay. See Barbosa 9 v. Soloman, 235 F.3d 31, 37 (1st Cir. 2000) ("Because we think 10 that this approach has a logical consistency that harmonizes two 11 apparent inconsistent sections"). Barbosa was most 12 concerned with the debtor's ability to continue to make payments 13 under the plan and the pre-petition creditors' interest in 14 preserving that ability. Id.

15 C. "The estate transformation approach" – Only 16 property needed to fund the plan is estate 17 property, all other property is under the debtor's 18 control.

19 Under this approach, the view is that the debtor is competent 20 to manage all property not needed to fulfill the plan. Under this 21 approach, at confirmation property of the estate vests in the 22 debtor, and the estate remains funded by way of post-confirmation 23 earnings and acquisitions. See Matter of Heath, 115 F.3d 521, 524
24 (7th Cir. 1997):

25 We read the two sections, 1306(a)(2) and 1327(b), to mean 26 simply that while the filing of the petition for bankruptcy 27 places all the property of the debtor in the control of the 28 bankruptcy court, the plan upon confirmation returns so much of that property to the debtor's control as is not necessary to the fulfillment of the plan.

29 In Heath, the confirmation order stated "the debtor's income and 30 other assets including accounts receivables (sic) remain estate 31 property to the extent necessary to fulfill the plan." Id. at

1 522-23. See also Telfair v. First Union Mortgage Corp., 216 F.3d
2 1333, 1340 (11th Cir. 2000) (“In this case, after confirmation, 3 only the amount required for the plan payments remained property 4 of the estate.”).

5 D. “The estate termination approach”—All property 6 reverts in the debtor and estate property is terminated upon confirmation.

7 Under this approach, all property of the estate vests in the 8 debtor at confirmation. See In re Petruccelli, 113 B.R. 5, 15
9 (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1990):

10 This court concludes that the reasoning of In re Mason, 11 45 B.R. 498 (Bankr. D. Or. 1984) is persuasive and that 12 § 1327(b) means what it appears to say — that is, that upon 13 confirmation property of the estate vests in the debtor and is no longer property of the estate, unless the plan or order of confirmation provides otherwise.

14 The Petruccelli court found:

15 Given that § 1306(b) gives debtors possession of property of 16 the estate, § 1327(b) would be rendered meaningless if it were not found to vest title and ownership in the debtor upon 17 confirmation . . . § 1327(b) is the more specific statute relating to the circumstances. It is a traditional canon of 18 construction that the specific statute controls the more general statute in the face of an apparent conflict.

19 Id. See also Oliver v. Toth (In re Toth), 193 B.R. 992, 996 20 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996) (finding the Petruccelli analysis the most 21 persuasive; policy reasons (being able to obtain credit and use 22 property after confirmation) support concluding vesting at 23 confirmation ends the estate.¹⁵); In re Dagen, 386 B.R. 777, 782 24 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2008) (“only the estate termination approach gives

25
26
27 15 But see In re Clark, 71 B.R. 747 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987), for 28 the opposite conclusion that policy reasons (protecting debtor and resources from post-petition creditors) support continuing the estate post-confirmation.

1 effect to the literal terms of § 1327(b)”).

2 This approach has been criticized by courts that adopt one of 3 the other approaches as not giving proper effect to Section 1306.

4 4. The “estate termination approach” appropriately
5 interprets and gives effect to Sections 1306 and 1327

6 We agree with the bankruptcy court’s interpretation and adopt 7 the estate termination approach for several reasons.

8 Under the estate termination approach, the vesting of all 9 estate property in the debtor at confirmation (unless the plan or 10 confirmation order provides otherwise) and the concomitant 11 termination of estate property gives effect to both Sections 1306 12 and 1327. Section 1306 generally defines property of the estate 13 as all property held by the debtor when the Chapter 13 case is 14 commenced and any property thereafter acquired until the case is 15 “closed, dismissed, or converted.” Simply put, Section 1306 16 establishes the moment when estate property is first created and 17 the outside triggering event which terminates property of the 18 debtor from becoming estate property. Significantly, Section 1306 19 does not state that property of the estate can only become non-20 estate property when the case is closed, dismissed, or converted.
21 Section 1327(b) “vests” estate property in the debtor upon 22 confirmation unless the plan or order provides otherwise. The 23 conclusion that “vesting” property of the estate in the debtor 24 terminates estate property is confirmed by Section 1327(c).
25 Section 1327 (c) provides that “property vesting in the debtor 26 . . . is free and clear of any claim or interest . . . provided 27 for by the plan.” The change in language from “vests . . .
28 property of the estate” to “property vesting in the debtor” is

1 compelling to this Panel's conclusion that confirmation changes 2 estate property to property of the debtor unless the plan or 3 confirmation order specifically provides otherwise.

4 The estate termination approach effectuates the important 5 choice Section 1327(b) gives to the debtor as to whether property 6 of the estate remains (and to what extent) after confirmation.
7 Section 1327(b) expressly provides the debtor with the ability to 8 vest in itself all, none, or some combination of estate property.
9 The other three approaches deny the debtor this full choice. The 10 estate termination approach implements a major theme of Chapter 13 11 by preserving to the debtor the ability to have ownership, as well 12 as possession, of all property. See 8 Collier on Bankruptcy 13 ¶ 1327.03, at p. 1327-11 (15th ed. rev. 2008).

14 In so holding, we conclude that collection of a post-petition 15 debt can occur against a Chapter 13 debtor who does not otherwise 16 provide in the plan or confirmation order that all property 17 remains property of the estate. This gives effect to 18 Section 1327(b).¹⁶ Conversely, under our holding, if the Chapter 19 13 plan or confirmation order provides that all or some portion of 20 property of the estate remains property of the estate post-21 confirmation, then collection of a post-petition debt can only be 22 made against the debtor's property, if any (unless relief from 23 stay is obtained). This interpretation also gives effect to 24 Section 1306.

25 Further, "vests" as used in Section 1327(b) means more than 26

27 28 ¹⁶ We recognize that the vesting of former estate property back in the debtor does not dissolve the automatic stay with respect to pre-petition claims against the debtor.

1 obtaining possession of estate property because Section 1306(b) 2 already provides that debtors remain in possession of all estate 3 property. Otherwise, "vests" as used in Section 1327(b) is 4 superfluous.¹⁷ We conclude that "vests" means absolute ownership, 5 not mere possession.

6 Our holding that under Section 1327(b) the estate may cease 7 to exist prior to the case being "closed, dismissed, or 8 converted," does not harm bankruptcy policy. Because the debtor 9 is given the choice (subject to court approval), the debtor's 10 decision dictates which competing policy (protect pre-petition 11 creditors and the ability to complete a plan, versus a debtor's 12 access to credit and use of property post-confirmation) the debtor 13 wishes to utilize. Thus, the estate termination approach does not 14 harm bankruptcy policy.

15 Under the estate termination approach, and on our facts, 16 there was no automatic stay in effect at the time the return was 17 filed. Here, estate property revested in Jones on September 12, 18 2002, when her Chapter 13 plan was confirmed. When she filed her 19 return on October 15, 2003 (on the due date), the taxes were "self 20 assessed." Thus, at the time the taxes were assessed, there was 21 no estate property for the automatic stay to protect,¹⁸ leaving the 22 FTB free to collect on its tax claim.

24 17 Petrucelli, 113 B.R. at 15 ("§ 1327(b) would be rendered 25 meaningless if it were not found to vest title and ownership in the debtor upon confirmation").

26 18 See Shell Oil Co. v. Capital Financial Services, 170 B.R.
27 903, 905 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1994) (IRS post-confirmation 28 assessment/lien was not against estate property because confirmation terminates the stay.).

1 5. The plan provides that property of the estate vests in 2 the Debtor

3 Here, the Debtor's Chapter 13 plan provides: "[t]he debtor(s) 4 elect to have property of the estate revert in the debtor(s) upon 5 plan confirmation. Once the property reverts, the debtor(s) may 6 sell or refinance real or personal property without further order 7 of the court, upon approval of the Chapter 13 Trustee." Such 8 language clearly expresses Jones' choice to have estate property 9 revert as her property at confirmation subject to some supervision 10 by the Chapter 13 Trustee. Importantly, Section 1327(b) does not 11 require a debtor to make an affirmative election in order for 12 estate property to vest in the debtor upon confirmation. However, 13 Section 1327(b) does require a debtor to provide in a plan or 14 confirmation order its election to have property remain property 15 of the estate post-confirmation.¹⁹

16 6. The confirmation order did not contain language which 17 would prevent revesting in the Debtor under Section 1327(a)

18 The confirmation order stated: "the future income of the 19 Debtor(s) is submitted to the supervision and control of the 20 Trustee, as is necessary for the execution of the Plan." The FTB 21 argues that such language creates confusion when compared with the 22 plan language that reverts estate property in the Debtor. We 23 recognize that ambiguities are to be construed against the debtor 24 who drafted the plan, but we do not see any ambiguity here.

26 ¹⁹ Petrucelli, 113 B.R. at 17 ("the better approach, as 27 recognized by many of the cases, is that revesting of all of the 28 property of the estate occurs upon confirmation, as contemplated by § 1327(b), unless revesting is expressly postponed, as authorized by § 1327(b).").

1 According to the FTB, the "supervision and control"²⁰ language
2 demonstrates Debtors' election that estate property does not cease 3 at confirmation.²¹ We disagree. Such language does not rise to 4 the level of triggering the "except as otherwise provided" 5 election in Section 1327(b). See Laughlin v. I.R.S., 98 B.R. 494, 6 496 (D. Neb. 1989) (" that the trustee retains supervision and 7 control . . . does not compel the result that such property be 8 labeled 'property of the estate'"); Petrucelli, 113 B.R.
9 at 17 ("If a debtor seeks to postpone reversioning of all or some of 10 the property of the estate, the plan or order of confirmation 11 should clearly say so. Saying so is easy to do."). The 12 "supervision and control" language gives the trustee a basis for 13 monitoring and requiring execution of the provisions of the plan.
14 Such language does not negate the reversioning of property at 15 confirmation.

16 7. Equity does not favor the FTB

17 The parties have not provided, nor have we found, a case 18 where a taxing authority such as the FTB has been sanctioned for 19

20 _____ 21 20 See Section 1322(a)(1).

22 21 FTB cites to In re Allen, 241 B.R. 710, 719 (Bankr. D. Mont.
23 1999). Allen concerned Chapter 13 confirmation issues, holding 24 that "supervision and control" language contained in a plan 25 complies with the Section 1327(b) election, therefore future 26 income remains estate property. We disagree as to the import of 27 such language. Allen implicitly recognized that the "supervision 28 and control" language may not clearly postpone reversioning when it held: "[t]he confirmation order shall include a provision that all future income of the Debtor from whatever source is necessary for completion of the Plan and thus is property of the estate, and does not vest in the Debtor post-confirmation." Id. at 719.

1 attempting collection post-confirmation on a post-petition debt.²²

2 We consider this relevant to the FTB's basic premise that the 3 uncertainty caused by the split of authority disabled the FTB's 4 claim.²³ Uncertainty as to the law is different from a taxing 5 authority being "disabled" in protecting its claim, as found in 6 Young. Here, although the FTB did not, it could have sought 7 relief from the stay under Section 362(d) or moved to dismiss²⁴ 8 Debtor's case in order to confirm its right to collect on its 9 post-confirmation claim. Many of the cases²⁵ applying equitable 10 tolling under Section 105 concern multiple unpaid tax periods 11 (both pre and post-petition) along with successive and repetitive 12 bankruptcy filings. Such is not the case before us. Based on the 13 facts here, we decline to apply equitable tolling under

15
16 22 On the other hand, the parties cite cases where a taxing 17 authority holding a post-petition claim was permitted to collect 18 post-confirmation. See Petrucelli, 113 B.R. at 17 (IRS post-19 confirmation levy did not violate the stay, thus debtor's motion 20 for sanctions under § 362(h) is denied.); Laughlin v. I.R.S., 98 B.R. at 496 (IRS did not violate the automatic stay in attempting to recover funds post-confirmation held by the Chapter 13 trustee.).

21 23 Over a year passed between dismissal of Jones' Chapter 13 22 and the Chapter 7 filing. Nothing in the record indicates the 23 FTB moved to collect the tax during that time period. This seems odd, since the essence of FTB's argument is that the automatic stay prevented collection.

24 24 Dismissal may be warranted where a debtor fails to pay post-25 petition taxes.

26 25 We have previously held that where there is serious inequity 27 the bankruptcy court's equitable authority found in 28 Section 105(a) can be used to suspend the priority tax periods.
See Gurney v. State of Ariz Dep't of Revenue (In re Gurney), 192 B.R. 529 (9th Cir. BAP 1996).

25 26 We recognize that the FTB chose to err on the side of 26 caution and avoid what it saw as a potential violation of the 27 stay. We do not fault the FTB for its healthy respect of the 28 automatic stay. Our holding allows a taxing authority, under certain circumstances, to initiate collection for a post-petition tax right away as opposed to waiting perhaps years for a case to be dismissed or discharged.
