

DEC 15 2005

NOT FOR PUBLICATION

HAROLD S. MARENUS, CLERK
U.S. BKCY. APP. PANEL
OF THE NINTH CIRCUIT

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY APPELLATE PANEL OF THE NINTH CIRCUIT

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

In re:	)	BAP No.	AZ-05-1124-MoSK
	)
DONALD BUSH and NANCY BUSH,	)	Bk. No.	03-06824-PHX-SSC
	)
Debtors.	)	Adv. No.	03-00824-PHX-SSC
	)
_____	)
DONALD BUSH and NANCY BUSH,	)
	)
Appellants,	)
	)
v.	)
	)
TOM WOODS and BECKY WOODS,	)
	)
Appellees.	)
_____	)

MEMORANDUM<sup>1</sup>

Argued and Submitted on September 22, 2005
at Phoenix, Arizona

Filed - December 15, 2005

Appeal from the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Arizona

Honorable Sarah Sharer Curley, Bankruptcy Judge, Presiding.

_____
Before: MONTALI, SMITH and KLEIN, Bankruptcy Judges.

_____
<sup>1</sup> This disposition is not appropriate for publication and may not be cited to or by the courts of this circuit except when relevant under the doctrines of law of the case, claim preclusion, or issue preclusion. See 9th Cir. BAP Rule 8013-1.

1 Debtors Donald and Nancy Bush appeal from the bankruptcy
2 court's judgment that they owe $171,570.00 to Tom and Becky Woods
3 and that such debt is nondischargeable under Section
4 523(a)(2)(A).<sup>2</sup> The Woodses concede that because Ms. Bush is an 5 "innocent" spouse the judgment should not apply to her personally
6 or her separate property. The Bushes argue that it should also 7 not apply to Ms. Bush's interest in community property. We reject
8 that argument and the Bushes' contention that the parol evidence
9 rule bars Mr. Woods' testimony about the nature of the transaction
10 between the parties. We nevertheless REVERSE IN PART because the 11 Woodses did not make a claim on that part of the debt owed by Mr.
12 Bush arising from an oral loan, and because recovery on the oral 13 loan is barred by Arizona's statute of limitations. We remand for 14 entry of judgment in the lesser amount due on a promissory note.

15 I. FACTS

16 In 1998, Mr. Woods made two loans to Mr. Bush. In the first 17 loan, Mr. Woods wired $106,000 to an overseas bank account as 18 directed by Mr. Bush. In return, Mr. Woods received a $212,000
19 promissory note ("Note"), due in three months. The second loan,
20 for $65,570, had no written documentation. No payments were ever 21 made, and on April 22, 2003, Mr. and Ms. Bush filed their joint 22 voluntary Chapter 7 petition.

23 On September 13, 2003, Mr. and Ms. Woods filed their 24 nondischargeability complaint against the Bushes. The Woodses'

---

25
26 <sup>2</sup> Unless otherwise indicated, all chapter, section and rule
27 references are to the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101-1330, and 28 to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rules 1001-9036, as enacted and promulgated prior to the effective date of The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005,
Pub. L. 109-8, Apr. 20, 2005, 119 Stat. 23.

1 complaint identified the two separate loans, but treated both as 2 if they were made pursuant to the Note. In their prayer, they 3 requested damages of $171,570, plus interest, costs and attorney's 4 fees, "reflecting the debt due them on the note signed by 5 Defendant Donald Bush." They alleged that Mr. Bush fraudulently
6 represented that the loans were for an investment in a pump
7 station in Arizona and that Mr. Woods would receive double (viz.
8 $106,000 x 2 = $212,000) his money back in three months after 9 European investors put money into the project.<sup>3</sup>

10 In their answer, the Bushes acknowledged that the Woodses
11 wired separate payments of $106,000 and $65,570. They did not 12 include as an affirmative defense that the later payment was an 13 oral loan barred by the statute of limitations. In the parties'
14 joint pre-trial statement, they stipulated as an undisputed
15 statement of material fact that the "[Mr.] Woods made two loans, 16 the first for $106,000.00 and the second for $65,570.00," but did
17 not mention an oral loan.

18 At trial, the Bushes' attorney elicited testimony from Mr.
19 Woods that the second payment was an oral loan and that no action
20 had been brought to collect it until after the Bushes filed their 21 bankruptcy petition. The Woodses' attorney did not object to this 22 testimony and did not introduce any evidence to show, or otherwise 23 argue, that an action on the second loan had been brought within 24 Arizona's three-year statute of limitations on oral obligations.
25 Instead, he clarified that the Woodses' claim was only for amounts

---

27 <sup>3</sup> Mr. Bush contends that he told Mr. Woods the funds were for 28 a Nigerian farm equipment export deal where they would wire money to Nigeria and receive a $4,000,000 "commission" in return.

1 due under the Note, and conceded in his closing argument that
2 action on the $65,570 oral loan was probably barred by the statute
3 of limitations. In his closing argument, the Bushes' attorney
4 agreed and argued that the statute of limitations barred action on 5 the oral loan.

6 After trial the bankruptcy court issued a memorandum decision
7 holding that Mr. Bush had engaged in actual fraud and had 8 knowingly made numerous false representations with the intent to 9 deceive Mr. Woods, on which Mr. Woods justifiably relied, thereby 10 sustaining a loss of the $171,570 of principal. The court did not 11 address the statute of limitations issue or award prejudgment
12 interest, costs, or attorney's fees. As to Ms. Bush, the court 13 added that:

14 Mr. Bush obtained the funds and, presumably, utilized
15 them on behalf of himself and his marital community.
16 No evidence was presented by Ms. Bush to rebut the 17 presumption that Mr. Bush incurred a community
18 obligation and utilized the funds for the benefit of 19 the community.

20 The Woodses submitted, and the bankruptcy court signed, a 21 judgment ("Judgment") that "Donald and Nancy Bush" owe them
22 $171,570 and that such debt is nondischargeable. The Bushes filed 23 a timely appeal.

24 II. ISSUES

25 1. Does the parol evidence rule bar the admission of Mr.
26 Woods' testimony about the pump station?

27 2. Should Ms. Bush's community property be liable on the 28 Judgment?

3. Should Ms. Bush's sole and separate property be liable on the Judgment?

1 4. Did the bankruptcy court err in including the oral loan in 2 the Judgment?

3 III. STANDARDS OF REVIEW

4 "We review the bankruptcy court's conclusions of law and 5 questions of statutory interpretation de novo, and factual
6 findings for clear error. When there are two permissible views of 7 the evidence, the trial judge's choice between them cannot be 8 clearly erroneous." Vill. Nurseries v. Gould (In re Baldwin
9 Builders), 232 B.R. 406, 410 (9th Cir. BAP 1999) (citations 10 omitted).

11 "The procedural sufficiency of a pleaded claim or defense in 12 federal court is governed by federal rules, even though the 13 defense relied on may be a state defense." Wyshak v. City Nat'l 14 Bank, 607 F.2d 824, 827 (9th Cir. 1979). We review the 15 sufficiency of the pleading of an affirmative defense de novo.
16 Owens v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan, Inc., 244 F.3d 708, 713 (9th 17 Cir. 2001).

18 IV. DISCUSSION

19 1. The Parol Evidence Rule Does Not Bar Admission Of Mr. Woods'
20 Testimony About the Pump Station

21 The Bushes contend that Mr. Woods' testimony about the nature
22 of the transaction between the parties should have been barred by 23 the parol evidence rule. Mr. Woods testified that he thought he 24 was investing in a pump station. The Bushes assert that this 25 testimony violates Arizona's parol evidence rule and should be 26 barred because it contradicts the parties' written agreement, the 27 Note, which establishes that the transaction was a loan, not an 28 investment in a pump station.

1 Arizona's parol evidence rule governs because federal courts
2 apply state law regarding the parol evidence rule. Jinro Am. Inc.
3 v. Secure Invs., Inc., 266 F.3d 993, 998-999 (9th Cir. 2001).

4 "Arizona's parol evidence rule prohibits the introduction of 5 extrinsic evidence to vary or contradict, but not to interpret, an 6 agreement." Id. at 999. The court considered Mr. Woods'
7 testimony, along with other evidence, in determining that Mr. Bush
8 engaged in actual fraud within the meaning of Section
9 523(a)(2)(A), but not to vary or contradict the terms or 10 conditions of the Note. Neither the Woodses nor the Bushes
11 disputed any of the Note's terms and conditions, and the parol
12 evidence rule is not applicable.

13 The Bushes argue that Mr. Woods contradicted the Note when he 14 testified that the scheme was an "investment" which the Bushes
15 distinguish from a "loan." Mr. Woods testimony does not 16 contradict the terms of the Note because investments can take many 17 forms, including loans. Mr. Woods' testimony about the terms of 18 the transaction (doubling his money) is consistent with the 19 written terms of the Note.

20 Even if the written agreement did contradict Mr. Woods'
21 testimony (which it does not), the parol evidence rule does not 22 apply because "[p]arol evidence is always admissible to show fraud
23 in the inducement of a contract." Barnes v. Lopez, 544 P.2d 694, 24 697 (Ariz. App. 1976). The Bushes cite Spudnuts, Inc. v. Lane,
25 641 P.2d 912 (Ariz. App. 1982), for the proposition that parol
26 evidence, while admissible to show fraud even when it varies from 27 the terms of a writing, is inadmissible when it is squarely
28 against the terms of the writing. In Spudnuts, a franchisor sued

1 a franchisee for breach of contract. The franchisee used
2 fraudulent inducement as a defense and attempted to introduce
3 statements made by the franchisor before the contract was signed.
4 The court upheld the lower court's refusal to admit the parol
5 evidence, offered to show fraud in the inducement, because the 6 franchisor's alleged statements (that the Spudnuts shop would open 7 within six months) were squarely against the terms of the written
8 contract (that the franchisee was responsible for opening the shop 9 within six months).

10 Unlike the case at bar, the debtor in Spudnuts attempted to 11 use parol evidence to establish fraud in order to avoid 12 performance under the contract. The underlying case involved
13 establishing a debt pursuant to the contract. Here, the court
14 relied on evidence (Mr. Woods' testimony about the pump station)
15 not squarely against the terms of the contract, but in order to 16 establish fraud for purposes of nondischargeability. The fraud
17 question does not involve establishing a debt pursuant to 18 contract, which is a separate question altogether from 19 nondischargeability. See, e.g., RTC v. McKendry (In re McKendry), 20 40 F.3d 331, 336 (10th Cir. 1994) ("In bankruptcy court, there are 21 two separate and distinct causes of action: One cause of action is 22 on the debt and the other cause of action is on the 23 dischargeability of that debt . . . .").

24 Finally, we note that the Bushes did not raise the parol
25 evidence rule at trial or otherwise object to Mr. Woods'
26 testimony. In the Ninth Circuit, "appellate courts will not 27 consider arguments that are not 'properly raise[d]' in the trial
28 courts." O'Rourke v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (In re E.R. Fegert, Inc.),

1 887 F.2d 955, 957 (9th Cir. 1989). Therefore, they cannot raise
2 the issue on appeal.

3 For each of these reasons, we reject the Bushes' argument
4 that the bankruptcy court erred in admitting Mr. Woods' testimony
5 about the pump station in order to establish Mr. Bush's fraud.

6
7 2. Ms. Bush's Interest In Community Property Is Liable For The 8 Debt

9 Under section 524(a)(3), the nondischargeable debt of one 10 spouse that is a "community claim" is enforceable against after-11 acquired community property.<sup>4</sup> 4 Collier on Bankruptcy
12 ¶ 524.02[3][a], at 524-28 (15th ed. rev. 2005). After-acquired
13 community property remains free from prebankruptcy community
14 claims so long as "neither spouse has committed an act creating a 15 nondischargeable debt." Id. at 524-27, 524-28. The underlying 16 policy is that the "guilty spouse should not be able to hide
17 behind the innocent spouse's discharge" and "[b]oth spouses will 18 suffer by reason of one spouse's prior 'sins' insofar as after-19 acquired jointly owned community property is concerned." Judge v.
20 Braziel (In re Braziel), 127 B.R. 156, 158 n.9 (Bankr. W.D. Tex.
21 1991).

22 A "community claim" is a prepetition claim for which property
23 of the kind specified in section 541(a)(2), viz., community
24 property, is liable. 11 U.S.C. § 101(7).

25 The Bushes contend that Ms. Bush's interest in their 26 community property should not be liable for the Judgment because

---

27 <sup>4</sup> Non-exempt community property owned as of the petition date 28 is property of the estate under section 541(a)(2), subject to administration by the representative of the estate for the benefit of all creditors.

1 Ms. Bush did not participate in or know about her husband's fraud,
2 and because the marital community did not actually benefit from 3 the scheme. They contend that the Woodses had to show fraudulent
4 intent by Ms. Bush to enforce the judgment against her interest in 5 the community property. We agree with the Woodses that under 6 Arizona law, which governs, the marital community is "liable for 7 the intentional or negligent torts of one spouse when a community
8 purpose or benefit can be established." FDIC v. Soderling (In re
9 Soderling), 998 F.2d 730, 733 (9th Cir. 1993). See also Arcadia
10 Farms v. Rollinson (In re Rollinson), 322 B.R. 879, 881-882
11 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2005); Valley Nat'l Bank v. LeSueur, 53 B.R. 414, 12 416 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 1985).

13 The Bushes confuse this issue with whether an "innocent"
14 spouse and her separate property should be liable for the 15 nondischargeable debts of the "guilty" spouse. In Rollinson, the 16 court articulated a two-part inquiry to determine the 17 dischargeability of a debt as to an innocent co-debtor spouse.
18 322 B.R. at 881. First, the court determines "whether the debt is 19 a community debt or the sole and separate debt of the guilty
20 spouse." Id. This is a question of state law. Id. Second, if 21 the debt is found to be a community debt under state law, the 22 court must determine the scope of the discharge. Id. If the 23 court determines that the debt is nondischargeable to one spouse
24 and the debt is a community debt, then it is nondischargeable to 25 the marital community "and the innocence of the other spouse is no
26 defense to that liability." Id. at 880. The court reached a 27 similar result in LeSueur, 53 B.R. at 415 ("nonexempt, 28 post-petition community property and the separate property of the

1 spouse whose actions led to nondischargeability" held liable for 2 the debt).

3 Here the bankruptcy court found that Mr. Bush acted on behalf
4 of and for the benefit of the marital community in obtaining the 5 loans from Mr. Woods and utilized the proceeds to support the 6 community. That finding was not clearly erroneous. Accordingly,
7 the bankruptcy court was correct that as a matter of Arizona law,
8 the entire debt owed to Mr. Woods is a community obligation. See 9 Soderling, 998 F.2d at 733; Rollinson, 322 B.R. at 882; LeSueur,
10 53 B.R. at 416. As such, the Judgment constitutes a community
11 claim and as in Rollinson, since the debt is nondischargeable as 12 to Mr. Woods under section 523(a)(2)(A), it is nondischargeable as 13 to the marital community. Rollinson, 322 B.R. at 880.

14 The Bushes contend that the marital community should not be 15 held liable for Mr. Bush's actions because the marital community 16 did not actually benefit from the fraud and because Ms. Bush had 17 no knowledge of the fraud. The Bushes cite Taylor Freezer Sales
18 of Ariz., Inc. v. Oliphant (In re Oliphant), 221 B.R. 506 (Bankr.
19 D. Ariz. 1998), for the proposition that in an "innocent spouse"
20 case, the marital community may be held liable for one spouse's
21 fraud only when fraudulent intent is imputed to the innocent
22 spouse under "egregious facts and circumstances such as a large 23 benefit conferred upon the marital community." Their reliance is 24 misguided.

25 Oliphant involved a creditor's attempt to establish in 26 personam liability against an innocent spouse, or collect from her 27 sole and separate property, or both. There was no community
28 property at issue in Oliphant, nor would there be any in the

1 future because the debtor and her husband had divorced during the 2 bankruptcy case. Oliphant, 221 B.R. at 509. The court held that 3 "in order for the debt to be nondischargeable in the 'innocent'
4 spouse's [separate] bankruptcy," the plaintiff seeking a 5 nondischargeability order "must show culpable conduct or 6 fraudulent intent on the part of the 'innocent' spouse." Id. at 7 511. Oliphant is irrelevant because the Woodses are not
8 attempting to collect from Ms. Bush personally or her separate
9 property

10 The Bushes misapply the innocent spouse defense because it
11 applies "only to determine whether the innocent spouse gets her
12 own discharge, and thus whether her sole and separate property
13 will be free from [community] debt or liable for it." Rollinson, 14 322 B.R. at 884. We reject the Bushes' application of the defense
15 and hold that Ms. Bush's interest in after-acquired community
16 property is fully liable for the nondischargeable debt.

17 While it may seem harsh that all future community property
18 acquired by Ms. Bush (including future wages) will be liable on 19 the Judgment, Congress has continued in a bankruptcy setting the 20 community property state law notion that a spouse may subject the 21 other non-culpable spouse's community property interests to 22 nondischargeable debts. Congress alone has the authority to 23 provide relief to someone in Ms. Bush's situation; we do not.

24
25 3. Ms. Bush's Sole And Separate Property Is Not Liable For The 26 Debt

26 The Bushes contend that Ms. Bush's sole and separate property
27 should not be liable for the debt. The Woodses do not dispute the 28 issue, and agree that the Judgment should be modified to exempt

1 Ms. Bush and her sole and separate property.

2 4. The Bankruptcy Court Erred In Including The Amount Of The 3 Oral Loan In The Judgment

4 "Generally, a party cannot succeed on a cause of action not 5 stated in the complaint." Jodoin v. Samayoa (In re Jodoin), 209
6 B.R. 132, 136 (9th Cir. BAP 1997). In their complaint, the 7 Woodses requested $171,570 of damages, plus costs, interests, and 8 fees, on the Note. Mr. Woods conceded on cross examination that 9 $65,570 of that amount was on the separate oral loan. The Woodses
10 did not move to amend under Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b) ("Rule 15(b)")
11 and seek a nondischargeability determination on the oral loan.
12 Instead, they clarified that their claim was for recovery of 13 $212,000 on the Note. Accordingly, the bankruptcy court erred in 14 including the oral loan in the Judgment.<sup>5</sup>

15 Alternatively, the Bushes contend that the $65,570 oral loan
16 is barred by Arizona's statute of limitations and that the 17 bankruptcy court erred when it entered the Judgment that included 18 the oral debt. The Woodses assert that the Bushes waived the 19 statute of limitations defense by not pleading it in their answer,
20 and that the Bushes' assertion of the defense in closing arguments
21 was insufficient.

22 Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 8(c) ("Rule 8(c)") requires that a 23 defendant raise affirmative defenses, including the statute of 24 limitations, in the answer to a complaint. Rule 8(c) is intended
25 to prevent surprise and prejudice by giving the opposing party

---

26
27 <sup>5</sup> Why the Woodses did not seek more than $106,000 on the Note
28 in their complaint is not before us. Perhaps they were concerned about the excessive interest involved in seeking to double their money on a three month obligation.

1 notice of the affirmative defense and time to rebut it. See,
2 e.g., Moore, Owen, Thomas & Co. v. Coffey, 992 F.2d 1439, 1445
3 (6th Cir. 1993); Harris v. Sec'y, U.S. Dept. of Veterans Affairs, 4 126 F.3d 339, 343 (D.C. Cir. 1997). Under Rule 8(c), an 5 affirmative defense is generally waived and excluded from the case
6 if not pleaded in the answer. Id.

7 A defendant is entitled to have a complaint state whether a 8 claim is for an oral debt, and, if so, its duration, because "in 9 the absence thereof, it cannot know whether to plead affirmative
10 defenses based on applicable statutes of limitations." Marquardt-
11 Glenn Corp. v. Lumelite Corp., 11 F.R.D. 175, 177 (S.D.N.Y. 1951).
12 See also Reed v. Gen. Implement Exp. Corp., 9 F.R.D. 182, 183
13 (N.D. Ohio 1949) ("An oral contract, by its very nature, requires
14 specific identification in pleading as to time, place, and parties 15 or agents."). Because the Woodses did not allege, describe, or 16 make a claim on the oral loan in their complaint,<sup>6</sup> the Bushes were 17 not required to plead the statute of limitations in their answer
18 and did not waive the defense by not pleading it. See Stupak v.
19 Hoffman-La Roche, Inc., 315 F. Supp. 2d 970, 973 (E.D. Wis. 2004)
20 ("It would be unreasonable to prevent a defendant from asserting a 21 defense that was not reasonably apparent until after his 22 responsive pleading was filed.").

23 Even if the complaint had alleged an oral loan, an 24 affirmative defense is not always waived when not pleaded in the 25

---

26 <sup>6</sup> The Woodses first attempted to recover on the oral loan 27 when they submitted their proposed judgment, having previously 28 clarified at trial that they were only attempting to collect the amount due on the Note and having acknowledged that collection on the oral loan was likely barred by the statute of limitations.

1 answer. Coffey, 992 F.2d at 1445. Exceptions to Rule 8(c) are 2 recognized when late assertion of an affirmative defense gives the 3 plaintiff fair notice of the defense, does not result in surprise
4 or prejudice, or when the issue is tried by the express or implied
5 consent of the parties. See, e.g., Wyshak, 607 F.2d at 827 ("The 6 key to determining the sufficiency of pleading an affirmative
7 defense is whether it gives plaintiff fair notice of the 8 defense."); Allied Chem. Corp. v. Mackay, 695 F.2d 854, 855-856
9 (5th Cir. 1983) ("[W]here the matter is raised in the trial court
10 in a manner that does not result in unfair surprise, . . .
11 technical failure to comply precisely with Rule 8(c) is not 12 fatal."); Jones v. Miles, 656 F.2d 103, 107 n.7 (5th Cir. 1981)
13 (failure to plead an affirmative defense "does not constitute a 14 waiver where there is no claim of surprise"); Coffey, 992 F.2d at 15 1445 (affirmative defense not waived if the defendant raises the 16 issue "at a pragmatically sufficient time" and the plaintiff is 17 not "prejudiced in its ability to respond"); Haskins v. Roseberry, 18 119 F.2d 803, 805 (9th Cir. 1941) (under Rule 15(b), the statute
19 of limitations defense is not waived by failure to plead it when 20 the issue is tried by express or implied consent of the parties).
21 Nonetheless, to take advantage of these exceptions, "the defendant 22 remains obligated to act in a timely fashion" and to raise the 23 statute of limitations "at the earliest possible moment." Venters 24 v. City of Delphi, 123 F.3d 956, 967 (7th Cir. 1997) (internal 25 quotations omitted).

26 Here, the Woodses were the first parties to raise the statute
27 of limitations issue when their counsel conceded, in closing 28 arguments, that the $67,570 payment was an oral debt that might

1 not be enforceable under state law, and that "these funds . . .
2 are probably going to be gone." Since the Woodses raised and 3 conceded the statute of limitations themselves, they cannot claim
4 they lacked notice of the defense when the Bushes asserted it in 5 closing arguments, or were surprised or prejudiced by the Bushes'
6 failure to raise the defense in their answer. See Jones, 656 F.2d
7 at 107 ("[A]n affirmative defense is not waived to the extent that 8 . . . the opposing party's own evidence discloses the defense.");
9 Coffey, 992 F.2d at 1445 ("[I]f a plaintiff receives notice of an 10 affirmative defense by some means other than the pleadings, . . .
11 defendant's failure to comply with Rule 8(c) does not cause the 12 plaintiff any prejudice.").

13 Moreover, the litigation of the issue at trial supercedes any 14 alleged omission in the answer. See Rule 15(b); Harris, 126 F.3d 15 at 344 ("Where a matter has gone to trial and parties have 16 litigated the unpled issues by express or implied consent, Rule
17 15(b) may render a failure to amend irrelevant."); Haskins, 119
18 F.2d at 805 (Rule 15(b) cures failure to plead the statute of 19 limitations in the answer when the issue is tried by the express
20 or implied consent of the parties); Jones, 656 F.2d at 107 n.7
21 ("[A]n affirmative defense is not waived if the party who should 22 have pled the defense introduces evidence in support thereof
23 without objection by the adverse party or . . . the opposing 24 party's own evidence discloses the defense, necessarily indicating 25 his express consent."); 6A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur Miller,
26 Federal Practice and Procedure § 1493, at 19 (2d ed. 1990)
27 (implied consent under Rule 15(b) "seems to depend on whether the 28 parties recognized that an issue not presented by the pleadings

1 entered the case at trial."); Dunn v. Trans World Airways, Inc., 2 589 F.2d 408, 413 (9th Cir. 1978) (Rule 15(b) cured any defect in 3 the plaintiff's pleadings when the defendant raised an issue not 4 disclosed in the pleadings, the parties were aware of the issue,
5 and evidence regarding the issue was introduced at trial).
6 Accordingly, the Bushes did not waive the statute of limitations
7 defense. They were fully justified in presenting uncontroverted 8 evidence that the $65,570 portion of the amount sought by the 9 Woodses was based on an obligation that was barred by the statute
10 of limitations.

11 The Woodses argue that an affirmative defense cannot be 12 raised for the first time in closing arguments. Under the 13 circumstances, asserting the statute of limitations in closing
14 arguments came at a pragmatically sufficient time (immediately 15 after the Woodses raised the issue) and the Woodses were not 16 prejudiced in their ability to respond (because they had already 17 conceded the issue). See Coffey, 992 F.2d at 1445. Furthermore, 18 a Rule 15(b) amendment may be made at any time, even after 19 judgment.<sup>7</sup> Rule 15(b).

20 Because the Bushes properly asserted and did not waive the 21 statute of limitations defense, and because the Woodses conceded
22 the issue, the bankruptcy court erred in including the oral loan
23 in the Judgment.<sup>8</sup>

---

24
25 <sup>7</sup> Even though the Bushes did not seek leave to amend their 26 answer, "such formality can be excused when the issue is otherwise adequately raised." Stupak, 315 F. Supp. 2d at 973.

27 <sup>8</sup> Even if the Woodses had not conceded the issue, the 28 evidence introduced at trial indicates that enforcement of the oral loan is barred by Arizona's three-year statute of limitations
(continued...)

1 V. CONCLUSION

2 The parol evidence rule does not bar Mr. Woods' testimony
3 regarding the circumstances of his investment with Mr. Bush. The 4 Bushes did not raise the parol evidence rule before the bankruptcy
5 court; it is inapplicable because Mr. Woods' testimony did not 6 contradict the Note and alternatively because he alleged fraud in 7 the inducement.

8 The Woodses need not establish any culpability by Ms. Bush in 9 order to enforce the Judgment against the Bushes' community
10 property. Nevertheless, the Woodses concede that the Judgment
11 should not impose liability on Ms. Bush personally or her separate 12 property.

13 We also hold that the Judgment must be reduced by $65,570, to 14 $106,000,<sup>9</sup> because the Woodses did not make a claim on the oral 15 loan and because the applicable statute of limitations bars any 16 action on it. The Bushes did not waive the statute of limitations 17 defense because the Woodses did not allege an oral debt in their 18 complaint and because the issue was litigated at trial.

19 Accordingly, we REVERSE IN PART and REMAND for entry of a 20 judgment based upon a principal obligation of $106,000 solely 21

---

22 <sup>8</sup> (...continued)
23 on oral debts. Mr. Woods made the oral loan in August 1998. He 24 testified that he "realized it wasn't going to work" six to eight 25 months later, indicating that the loan had already come due, and 26 that he had not filed any pre-bankruptcy collection actions against the Bushes in state court. Even if the cause of action did not accrue for a full year after the oral loan was made, the statute of limitations had expired when the Bushes filed their bankruptcy petition in April 2003.

27 <sup>9</sup> The Judgment submitted by the Woodses did not include any 28 interest, costs or attorney's fees. The panel does not express a view on whether the Woodses would have been entitled to more than $106,000, the amount loaned to Mr. Woods pursuant to the Note.

1 against Mr. Bush as a nondischargeable debt, enforceable against
2 him personally, his separate property, and all of the Bushes'
3 community property.

4
5

6 KLEIN, Bankruptcy Judge, dissenting in part:

7

8 I join the majority decision to the extent that it affirms
9 the $106,000 judgment declared nondischargeable on account of 10 fraud, concluding that the parol evidence rule does not bar
11 admission of testimony about the pump station, that community
12 property is liable for the debt, and that the separate property of 13 Nancy Bush is not liable for the nondischargeable debt incurred by 14 Donald Bush.

15 I do not agree, however, that the trial court erred when it
16 awarded the Woods' the other $65,570 component of the $171,570
17 that Donald Bush cheated them out of. I would affirm the judgment
18 of the trial court in its entirety on either of two alternative, 19 independent grounds. First, unlike the majority, I am persuaded
20 that the potential defense of statute of limitations with respect
21 to an oral loan was waived when it was not timely raised by 22 defendant. Second, because we can affirm (but not reverse) for 23 any reason supported by the record regardless of the whether the 24 limitations issue with respect to the oral debt was waived, I 25 would affirm on the basis that the plaintiff pled and proved the 26 elements of the tort of intentional misrepresentation, together 27 with damages of $171,570, in the course of establishing that the 28 debt is nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) (2).

2 The majority's reasoning that the complaint was too vague to 3 place the defendant on notice that he was being sued regarding a
4 transaction that might implicate a statute of limitations defense
5 is out of step with the requirements of notice pleading under 6 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8 as recently re-emphasized by the 7 Supreme Court. Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 510-15
8 (2002).

9 The complaint alleged two loans made in 1998 totaling 10 $171,570, the first of which was evidenced by a $212,000
11 promissory note, requesting "damages" of $171,570, plus interest
12 and costs, together with a determination that the debt is excepted
13 from discharge under 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(2) and (a)(6). The 14 answer conceded that the full $171,570 had been received. The 15 answer made no mention of a statute of limitations defense
16 notwithstanding the requirement of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure
17 8(c) that the defense of statute of limitations be set forth
18 affirmatively. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c), incorporated by Fed. R.
19 Bankr. P. 7008(a). Further, it was stipulated in the Joint 20 Pretrial Statement, which was silent about any limitations issue, 21 that plaintiffs "made two loans, the first for $106,000.00 and the 22 second for $65,570.00" and that "none of those moneys were ever 23 returned to Woods." Finally, there was no actual mention of the 24 statute of limitations until closing arguments after the 25 evidentiary record closed.

26 The nub of the question is whether testimony that the second
27 loan was made based on an oral agreement, which testimony Mr.
28 Bush's counsel elicited on cross-examination, amounts to express

1 or implied consent to try the question of the Arizona statute of 2 limitations on oral loans.<sup>1</sup> If the testimony amounted to consent
3 to try the limitations issue, then it would be permissible for the 4 trial court to deem the pleadings to conform to the evidence.
5 Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(b), incorporated by Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7015.
6 The analysis is necessarily on a case-by-case basis that turns
7 upon the peculiarities of the particular circumstances. Here, the 8 majority says there was consent to try the issue; I say no.

9 As of the beginning of trial, it is beyond cavil that the 10 statute of limitations defense had not been raised. The full 11 amount of the two loans was conceded. Nothing in the answer or 12 proceedings before trial hinted at a limitations defense.
13 Plaintiff had no notice that a limitations defense would be

14

---

15 <sup>1</sup>The pertinent testimony of Mr. Woods on cross-examination 16 was as follows:

17 Q. Now after you transferred the $106,000 overseas you made a second transfer; is that correct?

18 A. That's correct.

19 Q. And how many weeks transpired between the two transfers.

20 A. About a month actually.

21 Q. About a month?

22 A. Uh-huh.

23 Q. Did you get a new note executed when you transferred the second sums?

24 A. No, I did not.

25 Q. All right. Did you ever file a[n] action in state court attempting to collect on either one of the sums that you transferred, the 106 or the $65,000 and some cents?

26 A. No, I did not.

27 Q. First action you filed was the action that you filed in the bankruptcy court; is that correct?

28 A. That's correct. The reason being is is [sic] I didn't even know that Don Bush was filing bankruptcy. Okay? And the first time that I heard about it is when I get the notice that he had filed bankruptcy. All of a sudden it dawned on me, well, Mr. Bush has really been totally lying to me about everything from the git-go.

Tr. 3/11/04 at 34-35.

1 raised. One would have thought that any limitations defense had 2 been waived (or forfeited) as of that time.

3 The trial evidence was scant and was essentially limited to 4 the fraud victim's statement on cross-examination that the second
5 loan ($65,570) was made pursuant to an oral request about a month
6 after the defendant executed the $212,000 note in connection with 7 the initial $106,000 loan. Such testimony elicited in such 8 circumstances does not, in the context of this case, amount to 9 either express or implied consent to try the issue of the statute
10 of limitations regarding oral agreements. Moreover, the fact that 11 the oral nature of the second part of the loan transaction was 12 elicited on cross-examination is significant: it suggests that 13 defense counsel was sandbagging.

14 The majority inaccurately asserts that "the Woods did not 15 allege, describe or make a claim on the oral loan in their 16 complaint" and uses that assertion to excuse the defendant's
17 omission to plead the limitations defense. The reasoning is that,
18 in the absence of mention whether the debt is oral, a defendant
19 "cannot know whether to plead affirmative defenses based on 20 applicable statutes of limitations." In other words, the majority 21 thinks Mr. Bush was prejudiced by not being reminded in the 22 complaint that the second part of the debt was pursuant to his 23 oral agreement with the plaintiff.

24 I submit that it is so absurd to think that Mr. Bush could 25 not have known from the complaint that he needed to plead a 26 limitations defense, that it is impossible to find that he was 27 prejudiced. The full $171,570 amount of the two loans was alleged 28 in the complaint as the measure of damages. Since Mr. Bush was

1 the borrower and conceded the full amount of the two loans, he 2 plainly had notice that a claim was being made on both loans and,
3 similarly, plainly knew the circumstances of his transactions with 4 Mr. Woods.

5       There is no requirement for pleading the oral nature of a
6 loan. The fundamental pleading requirement is notice that gives 7 the defendant "fair notice of what the plaintiff's claim is and 8 the grounds upon which it rests." Swierkiewicz, 534 U.S. at 512;
9 Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47 (1957).

10       The Supreme Court's position in Swierkiewicz and Conley is 11 consistent with the explanation by Circuit Judge Charles Clark,
12 who was a prime architect of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 13 of notice pleading:

14       The notice in mind is rather that of the general nature of 15 the case and the circumstances or events upon which it is 16 based, so as to differentiate it from other acts or events, 17 to inform the opponent of the affair or transaction to be litigated - but not of details which he should ascertain for himself in preparing his defense - and to tell the court the broad outlines of the case.

18 Charles E. Clark, Simplified Pleading, 2 F.R.D. 456, 460-61
19 (1943).

20       It is worth noting that Form 6 of the Federal Rules of Civil 21 Procedure, which is the model "Complaint for Money Lent," does not 22 mention whether the loan is oral or based on a writing:

23       Form 6. Complaint for Money Lent

24       1. Allegation of jurisdiction.

25       2. Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for money lent
26 by plaintiff to defendant on June 1, 1936.

27       Wherefore plaintiff demands judgment against the defendant
28 for the sum of _____ dollars, interest, and costs.

28 Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 6.

1           As a matter of law, the Forms are sufficient under the rules
2 and indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement that the 3 rules contemplate. Fed. R. Civ. P. 84; Swierkiewicz, 534 U.S. at 4 513 n.4. Surely, Form 6 is not so inadequate as to excuse
5 compliance with Rule 8(c) by a defendant who plainly knows as much
6 (and probably more) about the transaction than the plaintiff.

7           The reality is that the defendant had precise notice of 8 actual transactions over which he was being sued, admitted the 9 transactions in the Answer and in the Joint Pretrial Statement
10 and, by definition, knew how he, as borrower, had obtained the 11 loans, including the oral nature of the second transaction. In 12 other words, he had the notice and the personal knowledge that put 13 him in the position of being about, and needing to, assert a 14 defense of statute of limitations in accordance with Rule 8(c) at 15 the time he filed his Answer.

16           It follows that the majority's emphasis upon the omission of 17 the complaint to mention the oral nature of the second loan as an 18 excuse for not pleading the limitations defense places an 19 unreasonable burden of specificity on the plaintiff. Such a 20 burden would amount to validating blame-the-victim strategy that 21 is the usual last refuge of a fraudfeasor.

22           Nor is it of any consequence that the plaintiff's counsel was 23 the first person to mention the possible existence of a statute of 24 limitations issue when, in closing argument, he appeared to 25 concede that the $65,570 might be barred by the statute of 26 limitations. In the first place, the fact that he made no mention 27 of the issue until he made his remark in closing argument can be 28 construed as indicating that, during the evidentiary phase of the

1 trial, there was no consent to try the issue and that the putative
2 raising of the issue was a matter of surprise and prejudice. In 3 the second place, the putative concession was ambiguous because it
4 was made in an "even if" context in which he was arguing that the 5 proper measure of damages was the $212,000 stated in the note;<sup>2</sup>
6 and defense counsel conceded that $212,000 might be the 7 appropriate measure of damages.<sup>3</sup> Moreover, the lack of lucidity
8 in that part of his argument is consistent with the proposition
9 that he had been sandbagged and was still picking himself up off 10 the floor.

---

11
12 <sup>2</sup>The pertinent portion of plaintiff's closing argument was:

13 We believe that we're entitled to judgment. We're 14 - we believe we're entitled [to] a finding of 15 nondischargeability and [to] a money judgment for the first
16 note of $212,000. Law in the Ninth Circuit is that interest
17 on a nondischargeable debt is also nondischargeable. The 18 agreement that Mr. Bush made was to pay $212,000. That is 19 the debt. It's not the [$]106,000 that was invested, it was 20 what the claim is. The claim is the note, the $212,000.

21 ...
22 So in effect Mr. Woods - the benefit of the bargain to Mr.
23 Woods was the 212, not simply a return of the money he 24 invested. The [$]67,000 admittedly is problematic. It's an 25 oral debt. I'm not sure that under applicable state law it
26 would be enforceable at the time of the filing of the 27 bankruptcy. So I will concede that those funds, I think, are 28 probably going to be gone. But I think we're entitled to the $212,000, which represents the claim, because that's the contractual obligation of Mr. Bush to Mr. Woods.

Tr. 3/11/04 at 71-72.

23 <sup>3</sup>The defense's closing argument responded:

24 Finally, the issue of damages, if you were to award them
25 to them. I don't agree with Mr. Hirsch that he gets the 26 [$]212,000 and interest. The amount here that they timely 27 brought a claim for is the $106,000 that was loaned pursuant 28 to a promissory note that allows them to collect $212,000 with no interest. So I think he needs to elect does he want his [$]106,000 back with interest or would he like to have the 212 with no interest, but he can't have it both ways.

Tr. 3/11/04 at 76.

1 It is also of some importance that the trial court did not
2 believe that the statute of limitations issue had been tried by 3 implied or express consent.

4 In short, I am persuaded that the defense of statute of 5 limitations with respect to an oral debt was waived.

6

7

II

8 Finally, the Woods' successful proof that the debt is 9 nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2) means, since the 10 essential elements in this Circuit are identical, that they pled
11 and proved the elements of the tort of intentional
12 misrepresentation. The court found fraud to the tune of damages
13 of $171,570.

14 The issue of the tort of intentional misrepresentation, i.e.
15 civil fraud, was tried by the parties. Nowhere in the record is 16 there any hint that the question of statute of limitations for 17 fraud was raised. The judgment matches precisely the measure of 18 simple damages for such a fraud.

19 This is an adequate independent basis supported by the record
20 for affirming.<sup>4</sup> I would do so.

21

22

23

---

24 <sup>4</sup>Another adequate, independent basis for affirming that is 25 arguably available would be to view the $171,570 in loans as a 26 single transaction in two installments that both were covered by 27 the $212,000 note. An advance made on an oral request that is 28 consistent with an existing note that can be viewed as establishing a loan facility is not an oral loan. It would not have been unreasonable for the parties to have regarded repayment of the $65,570 to have been assured by the existence of the $212,000 note.

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

***

At the human level, this appeal boils down to whether a fraudfeasor should be permitted to get away with $65,570 of the fraud on the theory that the fraudfeasor's silence about the statute of limitations regarding oral transactions cannot be held to constitute the fraudfeasor's waiver of a waivable defense because the fraudfeasor should not be charged with knowing that part of the fraudfeasor's ill-gotten gains were obtained through the fraudfeasor's oral request. My answer is in the negative.

On my reading of this trial record, the defense of statute of limitations for an action on an oral loan was waived in the pleadings (as confirmed by the Joint Pretrial Statement) and was not tried by express or implied consent. Moreover, the essential elements of the tort of intentional misrepresentation were necessarily tried by consent in the course of establishing that the debt is excepted from discharge under § 523(a)(2), which entitles us to affirm for a reason supported by the record, regardless of whether there was a waiver of the statute of limitations with respect to an action on an oral loan.

Accordingly, I DISSENT from that aspect of the decision and would affirm the entire judgment as entered by the trial court.