STATE OF WASHINGTON

DAROLD R.J. STENSON,

Plaintiff,

v.

ELDON VAIL, et al.

Defendants.

NO. 08-2-02080-8

REPLY TO RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS OR TRANSFER CASE TO THE SUPREME COURT

I. REPLY ARGUMENT

A. INTRODUCTION

Stenson challenges lethal injection and hanging as performed in Washington. Defendants moved to dismiss Stenson's complaint, asserting it is barred and fails to state a claim for relief. In response, Stenson argues the Defendants have misread Baze v. Rees, 128 S. Ct. 1520 (2008). Citing to Chief Justice Roberts' summary of the procedural history, and to the concluding paragraph of Justice Steven's concurrence, Stenson argues, "Under Baze, discovery of the state's methods is required, followed by 'extensive hearings' and fact-finding to determine whether the 'risk of pain from maladministration' of lethal drugs violates the Eighth Amendment." Response, at 2 (citing Baze, 128 S. Ct. at 1526 and 1552). Stenson is simply incorrect. Baze does not require "extensive hearings" or an individualized factually specific inquiry into the execution protocol of each and every State.

1 Declaring that additional fact finding is not needed to review the constitutionality of 2 lethal injection protocols in other States, Chief Justice Roberts rejected the suggestion that 3 the Court “leaves the disposition of other cases uncertain. . . .” Baze, 128 S. Ct. at 1537.
4 Stating that “the standard we set forth here resolves more challenges than [Justice Stevens]
5 acknowledges,” the Chief Justice expressly declared, “A State with a lethal injection 6 protocol substantially similar to the protocol we uphold today would not create a risk that 7 meets this standard.” Id. Justice Alito specially concurred on this point, clarifying that, 8 when properly understood, the Baze standard will not “lead to litigation that enables ‘those 9 seeking to abolish the death penalty . . . to embroil the States in never-ending litigation 10 concerning the adequacy of their execution procedures.’” Id. at 1538 (Alito, J., 11 concurring). Justice Alito stressed that only a misinterpretation of the Baze standard, the 12 one advanced by Stenson, “would create a grave danger of extended delay.” Id. at 1542.

13 Contrary to Stenson’s contention, courts post-Baze have not engaged in detailed 14 inquiries into lethal injection protocols of other states. On the contrary, courts have 15 applied Baze to summarily reject challenges to various lethal injection protocols. See, e.g., 16 Bennett v. State, 900 So.2d 155, 160-61 & n. 1 (Miss. 2008); Porter v. Commonwealth, 276 17 Va. 203, 237-38, 661 S. Ed. 2d 415, 431-32 (2008); Emmett v. Johnson, 532 F.3d 291 (4th 18 Cir. 2008); People v. Salcido, 44 Cal.4th 93, 169-70, 186 P.3d 437, 494 (2008); Sexton v.
19 State, ___ So.2d ___ (Fla. Sept. 18, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4240155), at *12; Ex 20 Parte Chi, 256 S.W.3d 702, 704 (Tex. Crim. App. 2008); Cooey v. Strickland, ___ F. Supp.
21 ___ (S.D. Ohio Sept. 30, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4449536); Cooey v. Strickland, ___ 22 F.3d ___ (6th Cir. October 9, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4516091); Ex Parte Belisle, 23 ___ So.2d ___ (Ala. October 3, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4447593). Contrary to 24 Stenson’s assertions, Baze did not create a new standard requiring extensive hearings in 25 order to resolve challenges to a method of execution. Henyard v. State, ___ So.2d ___ 26 (Fla. Sept. 10, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4148992), at *7.

1 B. STENSON'S LETHAL INJECTION CLAIM FAILS AS A MATTER OF LAW.

2 Baze did not impose a new standard of review that overturns prior case law 3 upholding the constitutionality of lethal injection. See Henyard v. State, ___ So.2d ___ 4 (Fla. Sept. 10, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4148992). Baze did not overturn the 5 Washington Supreme Court's prior decisions upholding lethal injection in Washington.
6 See In re Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 496, 965 P.2d 593 (1998). The Washington Supreme 7 Court's decision is still good law, and it is binding on this Court.

8 The Court is not required to hold extensive hearings when the policy is substantially 9 similar to the policy reviewed in Baze. Bennett, 990 So.2d at 160-61 (quoting Baze, 128 S.
10 Ct. at 1537). Under a correct application of the Baze standard, courts are not to become 11 "boards of inquiry charged with determining 'best practices' for executions" Baze, 12 128 S. Ct. at 1531; see also id. at 1532 n.2. Baze held it is not "objectively intolerable" for 13 a State to use the three drug protocol for lethal injection. Id. at 1532 & 1534. Baze held 14 the risk that the first drug, sodium thiopental, might be improperly prepared or 15 administered was not sufficient to establish a constitutional error. Id. at 1533. Speculation 16 that prison officials might be unqualified or err in the preparation and administration of the 17 first drug is not sufficient to render the method unconstitutional. Id. Baze also expressly 18 rejected the claim that a State must adopt an untried alternative method (i.e., the one drug 19 protocol), or adopt additional safeguards, in order to satisfy the Constitution. Id. at 1534-20 37.

21 Moreover, Stenson's claim that lethal injection in Washington is unconstitutional 22 because the Department's policy is not substantially similar to the Kentucky protocol at 23 issue in Baze is now moot. Assuming, arguendo, that Stenson was correct about the policy 24 in existence at the time he filed his complaint, the Department has since amended its policy 25 to ensure it is substantially similar to Kentucky's protocol. See Amended DOC Policy

1 490.200 (<http://www.doc.wa.gov/policies>)¹. The amended policy expressly requires 2 minimum qualifications of members of the lethal injection team (at least one or more years 3 of experience in a profession that involves intravenous injections), sufficient practice 4 sessions (at least three of which will include the siting of intravenous lines), the 5 establishment of two intravenous lines with a normal flow of saline through each line, the 6 administration of 3 grams of sodium thiopental, the Superintendent to observe the inmate 7 for signs of consciousness after the administration of sodium thiopental and before the 8 administration of pancuronium bromide, and the administration of an additional dose of 3 9 grams of sodium thiopental before the pancuronium bromide if the Superintendent observes 10 the inmate is conscious after the administration of the first dose of sodium thiopental.
11 Amended DOC Policy 490.200. The amended policy is substantially similar to Kentucky's 12 protocol, and Stenson's allegations are now moot.

13 Moreover, Stenson's other allegations fail to demonstrate a constitutional violation.
14 The allegation that there is a safer method of lethal injection fails because States are not 15 required to adopt an untried method of execution. Baze, 128 S. Ct. at 1534-35. Similarly, 16 the allegation that the Department should not use pancuronium bromide fails because the 17 use of this drug does not violate the Constitution. Id. at 1535-36. The allegation that there 18 are not expert medical professionals to ensure the inmate is properly sedated fails since 19 such safeguards are not required. Id. at 1536. The allegations concerning the need for 20 additional safeguards, such as having the policy expressly state where substances will be 21 stored in the prison or precisely state under what circumstances a pre-execution physical 22 examination of the inmate may occur, necessarily fail because Baze specifically rejected 23 the argument that a method of execution is unconstitutional if additional safeguards could 24 be, but are not, utilized by the State to avoid risks of pain. Id. at 1537. The allegation that

25 _____
26 ¹ For the Court's convenience, attached is a copy of Amended DOC Policy 490.200.

1 the policy does not forbid the use of “cut downs” fails because Stenson does not show he 2 would be a subject to such a procedure, and the allegation that there is no process for 3 determining an inmate’s psychiatric state fails because Stenson does not allege he has a 4 psychiatric state that would affect lethal injection, and because such an issue is irrelevant 5 to whether lethal injection violates the Constitution. Finally, Stenson’s complaint that a 6 physician is not on site to revive the inmate once the lethal substances are administered 7 fails because no case law requires such a process. The allegations concerning the lack of 8 such minute details in the policy seek to have this Court become a “board of inquiry” 9 charged with determining the “best practices” for execution by lethal injection, but the 10 Constitution and the correct application of Baze do not require or allow such an inquiry.
11 Baze, 128 S. Ct. at 1531; see also id. at 1532 n.2. The allegations fail as a matter of law.

12 C. THE COURT SHOULD DISMISS THE HANGING CLAIM.

13 Stenson’s response on hanging is limited to a footnote. The response fails to show 14 Stenson has standing to challenge hanging, and it fails to show hanging is unconstitutional.
15 In re Benn, 139 Wn.2d 868, 933, 952 P.2d 116 (1998); State v. Frampton, 95 Wn.2d 469, 16 512-14 & 527, 627 P.2d 922 (1981); State v. Campbell, 112 Wn.2d 186, 192, 770 P.2d 620
17 (1989); In re Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 496, 965 P.2d 593 (1998); In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 18 325-26, 868 P.2d 835 (1994); Campbell v. Wood, 18 F.3d 662, 687 (9th Cir. 1994).

19 D. THE ELECTION OF METHOD OF EXECUTION CLAIM IS MERITLESS.

20 Stenson fails to provide more than a conclusory response to the motion to dismiss 21 Stenson’s claim that he was denied due process because he is unable to make an informed 22 election of the method of execution. Response, at 24-25. Stenson’s argument fails to show 23 this claim has any merit. The Court should dismiss this claim as a matter of law.

24 E. THE ACTION CONSTITUTES A COLLATERAL ATTACK TO THE EXECUTION OF THE SENTENCE.

25 Defendants showed why Stenson’s declaratory judgment action falls within the 26

1 broad definition of a “collateral attack” under Washington law. Stenson responds to 2 Defendant’s position by arguing his action is actually a civil rights action presumably 3 brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. However, nowhere in his complaint does Stenson allege a 4 civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. See Brutsche v. City of Kent, 78 Wn. App. 370, 5 898 P.2d 319, 375 (1995). Instead, Stenson explicitly states his complaint is an action for 6 declaratory judgment and injunctive relief brought under chapters 7.24 and 7.40 RCW.
7 Complaint, at 3, ¶ 10. Since this is an action brought under state law, it is governed by 8 state law, including the law defining “collateral attack” contained in RCW 10.73.090(2).

9 Stenson argues this action is not a “collateral attack” because he is not challenging 10 his sentence. However, the complaint does not merely seek to enjoin a single method of 11 execution; it seeks such broad relief as a ruling that hanging itself (and not just hanging as 12 performed under the Department’s policy) is unconstitutional. Complaint, at 3 ¶ 5 (alleging 13 hanging is unconstitutional); see also Complaint, at 21, prayer for relief D and E (requesting 14 judgment that hanging is unconstitutional). “[A] constitutional challenge seeking to 15 permanently enjoin the use of lethal injection may amount to a challenge to the fact of the 16 sentence itself.” Nelson v. Campbell, 541 U.S. 637, 644 (2004); see also Hill v.
17 McDonough, 547 U.S. 573, 582 (2006). Stenson seeks to effectively prevent the execution 18 of his sentence. See In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 325-26 n.11, 868 P.2d 835 (1994) (a 19 finding that both lethal injection and hanging are unconstitutional would be tantamount to 20 forbidding death penalty). Since Stenson seeks to prevent his execution, this action falls 21 within the broad state law definition of “collateral attack.”

22 Transfer may be especially appropriate for two reasons. First, Stenson has filed a 23 separate action in the Supreme Court, seeking a writ of prohibition or mandamus and a stay 24 of execution, based upon his challenge to the setting of the date of execution. Stenson v.
25 Vail, Supreme Court Cause No. 82197-6. Rather than allowing Stenson to pursue 26 contemporaneous litigation in two courts, and potentially obtaining conflicting decisions on

1 the appropriateness of a stay, judicial economy is better served by transferring this action 2 for consolidation with Stenson's newly filed action. Second, the Supreme Court already 3 has before it a challenge to lethal injection as performed in Washington in the case of In re 4 the Personal Restraint of Cross, Supreme Court Cause No. 79761-7.

5 F. STENSON'S CLAIMS ARE BARRED UNDER THE STATUTE OF 6 LIMITATIONS, LACHES, AND RES JUDICATA.

7 Stenson's Complaint alleges a cause of action that accrued in 1997, with the 8 conclusion of his direct review. Stenson has known since 1997 that he will be executed by 9 either lethal injection or hanging. Stenson claims this is a civil rights action.² Under 42 10 U.S.C. § 1983, the statute of limitations on the claim is three years. Stenson waited 11 11 years, until the eve of his execution to raise this challenge. His claim is now time-barred 12 and this Court should adopt the reasoning of the Fifth, Sixth and Eleventh Circuits in 13 concluding that the State's interest in exercising its sovereign power to finalize its 14 judgment should not be delayed. See, e.g., McNair v. Allen, 515 F.3d 1168 (11th Cir.
15 2008); Cooley v. Strickland, 479 F.3d 412 (6th Cir. 2007); Cooley v. Strickland, ___ F.3d 16 ___ (6th Cir. Oct. 9, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4516091); Henyard v. Secretary, ___ 17 F.3d ___ (11th Cir. Sept. 23, 2008) (WESTLAW 2008 WL 4328570).³

18 Similarly, Stenson's claim is barred under the doctrine of laches. Laches bars an 19 action when a plaintiff had reasonable opportunity to discover the basis of the cause of 20 action, unreasonably delayed commencing the cause of action, and the defendant has been 21 damaged by the delay. All of these factors are present in this case. Stenson knew of this 22 cause of action, at the latest, in 1997. Stenson unreasonably delayed commencing this 23 action until the eve of his execution. Defendants' interest in the exercise of the State's 24 ² As argued in Section E, Stenson has not properly pled a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim.

25 ³ Stenson argues the statute of limitations does not apply because Defendants are subjecting him to a 26 "continuing constitutional violation". The courts cited above and in the motion to dismiss applying the statute of limitations have rejected such arguments, finding the cause of action accrues not when the inmate is to be executed, but when the defendant's conviction becomes final or the method of execution is adopted.

1 sovereign power to enforce judgments is severely prejudiced by Stenson's challenge at this 2 late date. Finally, as argued above, the policy need not be subjected to detailed fact finding 3 as it is substantially similar to the protocol analyzed in Baze. Baze, 128 S. Ct. at 1537.

4 Finally, res judicata bars Stenson's untimely challenge to the constitutionality of 5 lethal injection and hanging. The doctrine of res judicata serves to bar a claim where there 6 is an identity of claims, a final judgment on the merits, and an identity or privity of parties.
7 Loveridge v. Fred Meyer, Inc., 125 Wn.2d 759, 763, 887 P.2d 898 (1995). The doctrine of 8 res judicata further bars "issues that were or could have been raised in the prior action."
9 Mellor v. Chamberlin, 100 Wn.2d 643, 645, 673 P.2d 610 (1983). Contrary to Stenson's 10 assertion, there is privity of parties in this case and Stenson's habeas corpus action as both 11 name the superintendent of the Washington State Penitentiary. Stenson could have 12 challenged the constitutionality of lethal injection and hanging in his personal restraint 13 petitions. Thus, the orders denying the personal restraint petitions and the federal habeas 14 corpus petition, bar Stenson's claims in this Court. If the Court does not dismiss the action 15 as barred by RCW 10.73.090, and does not transfer it to the Washington Supreme Court, 16 the Court should dismiss Stenson's challenges to lethal injection and hanging as barred 17 under the statute of limitations, laches, and the doctrine of res judicata.

18 II. CONCLUSION

19 For the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that the Court dismiss 20 Stenson's complaint with prejudice, or in the alternative, transfer it to the Washington 21 Supreme Court for consideration as a personal restraint petition.
