cited in Wood v. Ryan, No. 14-16310 archived on September 9, 2014

In an about-face from previous open government decisions, Attorney General Greg Abbott's office said Thursday that Texas prison officials must keep secret the source of the state's execution drugs.

Disclosing the drug supplier's name would place the compounding pharmacy or pharmacist at substantial risk of "physical harm," Abbott's office said in a letter to prison officials.
