except as provided by 9th Cir. R. 36-3.

Seattle, Washington

Before: HAWKINS, McKEOWN and BYBEE, Circuit Judges.

Juan Barela appeals from the district court’s grant of summary judgment dismissing his claims against all defendants.<sup>1</sup> We affirm with respect to the City of Woodland, the Woodland Police Chief, Susan Baur,<sup>2</sup> Thomas Ladouceur, and Anne Cruser. We reverse with respect to Officer Jeanne Canepa.

Barela alleges that his First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated as a result of the City of Woodland’s policy of deliberate indifference toward constitutional rights—a policy that manifests itself during the training and supervision of City employees. Although a municipal government is not generally liable for the constitutional torts of its employees or agents, liability can attach under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 when a constitutional violation is caused by the execution of a government custom or policy. Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 694 (1978). In this case, however, Barela has not offered sufficient evidence—or indeed any evidence at all—that there was such a policy in place. Nor does Barela have sufficient evidence for his claim that the City of Woodland chief of police negligently failed to adequately train, instruct, or supervise his officers. The district court's dismissal of Barela's claims against both the City and its police chief was proper.

<sup>1</sup>The pleadings are inconsistent as to whether Lynn Barela is also a party to the appeal. To the extent that she is a party, her claims are dismissed for lack of standing. Nothing in the complaint, or in the record considered on summary judgment, supports a claim that she suffered a non-derivative, actionable harm. See Powers v. Ohio, 499 U.S. 400, 410 (1991) (“In the ordinary course, a litigant must assert his or her own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest a claim to relief on the legal rights or interests of third parties.”).

Barela does not dispute his lack of evidence with respect to these claims. He argues instead that the district court improperly dismissed his claims against the municipal defendants without first ruling on his motion to compel discovery—a motion that, if granted, might have yielded the evidence required. In fact, the district court considered Barela's motion to compel discovery along with the supporting materials, but denied the motion as moot following the summary judgment. Even if we assume that Barela intended the filing as a Rule 56(f) motion, the bare allegations with respect to both the Monell claim and the negligence claim against the chief of police were cursory at best and cannot support a remand for further discovery. The district court did not abuse its discretion in implicitly denying the motion and treating it as moot.

Barela has also failed to state valid claims against prosecutors Baur and Ladouceur, or against defense attorney Crusier. Both prosecutors were acting within the scope of their duties and are therefore “not amenable to suit under § 1983.” Kalina v. Fletcher, 522 U.S. 118, 124 (1997). Similarly, Crusier was acting in her capacity as public defender and was not a state actor for purposes of the statute. See Miranda v. Clark County, Nevada, 319 F.3d 465, 466 (9th Cir. 2003) (en banc).

We reverse the district court’s dismissal of Barela’s § 1983 claim against Officer Canepa. Under the Washington Privacy Act, it is not illegal to tape record a police officer when the officer does not have an expectation of privacy. See State v. Flora, 845 P.2d 1355, 1357-58 (Wash. Ct. App. 1992). See also Johnson v. Hawe, 388 F.3d 676, 683-85 (9th Cir. 2004). Even though the privacy act is not a basis for an arrest in this case, which Canepa knew or should have known, there is a dispute as to whether Barela’s legal use of the tape recorder obstructed Canepa's investigation under Woodland Municipal Code 9.08.010 (obstructing a law enforcement officer). There is also a disputed issue of fact as to whether Barela physically blocked the entrance to the examination room, thus impeding Canepa from interviewing Barela's granddaughters and obstructing a law enforcement officer. For this reason, we reverse the district court's grant of qualified immunity to Canepa, and remand for further proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

AFFIRMED IN PART, REVERSED IN PART, AND REMANDED. Each party shall bear its own costs on appeal.
