** The panel unanimously concludes that this case is suitable for decision without oral argument. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(2).

review for substantial evidence. Shrestha v. Holder, 590 F.3d 1034, 1039, 1047-48 (9th Cir. 2010).

Sargsyan's inconsistent testimony about the alleged May 2004 assault and subsequent hospitalization provides substantial evidence to support the adverse credibility finding. See id. at 1046–47 (“Although inconsistencies no longer need to go to the heart of the petitioner’s claim, when an inconsistency is at the heart of the claim it doubtless is of great weight.”). Furthermore, substantial evidence supports the finding that Sargsyan did not satisfactorily explain the inconsistencies.

Nor does the remaining evidence in the record compel a finding that Sargsyan more likely than not would be tortured by the government or with its acquiescence if she returns to Armenia. See id. at 1048–49 (If the adverse credibility determination is supported by substantial evidence, the remaining documents in the record must compel a finding of eligibility for relief under the Convention Against Torture).

PETITION FOR REVIEW DENIED.
