importation of methamphetamine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 952 and 960. We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and we affirm.

Stroud contends that the district court erred by refusing to consider a relevant sentencing factor, namely his mental infirmities, when it denied the parties' requests for a departure or variance. We review for plain error, see United States v. Valencia-Barragan, 608 F.3d 1103, 1108 (9th Cir. 2010), and find none. Contrary to Stroud's contention, the record shows that the district court considered his mental infirmities, granted a minor-role reduction to account for his limitations, and then simply concluded that the circumstances did not warrant a departure under U.S.S.G. § 5K2.13 or a variance. See Rita v. United States, 551 U.S. 338, 358 (2007). Moreover, the sentence is substantively reasonable in light of the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) sentencing factors and the totality of the circumstances, including the nature of the offense and Stroud's intellectual limitations. See Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 51 (2007); United States v. Blixt, 548 F.3d 882, 890-91 (9th Cir. 2008).
