Judge Guilford will receive the 2018 Ninth Circuit Professionalism Award from the American Inns of Court, a national organization that seeks to improve the practice of law by promoting mentorship and collegiality among the bar. The professionalism award is given annually in all of the federal circuits to “a lawyer or judge whose life and practice display sterling character and unquestioned integrity, coupled with ongoing dedication to the highest standards of the legal profession and the rule of law.”

The awards will be presented on Monday, July 23, 2018, during the opening session of the conference, an annual gathering of judges, lawyers and judicial administrators working in the federal courts of nine western states and Pacific islands.

Judge Guilford is being honored for his distinguished career and remarkable achievements, and commitment to mentoring and training the younger generation of lawyers in Orange County. He was nominated for the honor by Brett J. Williamson, president of the Howard T. Markey Intellectual Property Inn of Court in Orange County, California, which Judge Guilford helped found in 2013.
