SUMMARY

Disability Discrimination

The panel reversed the district court's summary judgment in favor of Sears, Roebuck and Co. in a former employee's diversity action alleging disability discrimination claims under California's Fair Employment and Housing Act.

The panel held that the employee presented triable claims under FEHA: (1) that Sears discriminated against the employee because of his disability; (2) that Sears declined to accommodate the employee's disability; and (3) that Sears did not engage in an interactive process to determine possible accommodation for the employee's disability. The panel noted that it was beside the point that some of the employee's evidence was self-serving because such testimony was admissible, though absent corroboration, it may have limited weight by the trier of fact at trial. The panel remanded for further proceedings.

GOULD, Circuit Judge:

Anthony Nigro appeals the district court’s entry of summary judgment in favor of his former employer Sears, Roebuck and Co. (“Sears”) in Nigro’s diversity action against Sears, alleging three disability discrimination claims under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (“FEHA”). We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291. We must decide whether there are any genuine issues of material fact on Nigro’s four discrimination claims. We conclude that the answer is yes, so we reverse and remand for further proceedings.

In May 2011, Nigro filed suit against Sears in California state court, claiming under FEHA (1) that Sears discriminated against him because of his disability, (2) that Sears declined to accommodate his disability, and (3) that Sears did not engage in an interactive process to determine possible accommodation for his disability. Nigro also alleged that Sears wrongfully terminated his employment in violation of California public policy. Sears removed the action to federal court. Sears then moved for summary judgment on each of Nigro’s claims, and the district court granted Sears’s motion on November 28, 2012. Nigro appealed.

We review the district court’s grant of summary judgment de novo. Del. Valley Surgical Supply, Inc. v. Johnson & Johnson, 523 F.3d 1116, 1119 (9th Cir. 2008). “We must determine, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to [Nigro], the non-moving party, whether there are any genuine issues of material fact and whether the district court correctly applied the substantive law.” Olsen v. Idaho St. Bd. of Med., 363 F.3d 916, 922 (9th Cir. 2004). A factual issue is genuine “if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party.” Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986).

I

To establish a prima facie case of disability discrimination under FEHA, Cal. Gov’t Code § 12940(a), Nigro must show that “(1) he suffers from a disability; (2) he is otherwise qualified to do his job; and, (3) he was subjected to adverse employment action because of his disability.” Faust v. California Portland Cement Co., 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729, 745 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007). The district court found that Nigro did not establish element (3), i.e., Nigro did not show a causal relationship between his termination by Sears and his disability.¹

To establish that he was terminated by Sears because of his disability, Nigro submitted a declaration stating that on June 29, 2009, he had a phone conversation with Larry Foerster, General Manager of the Sears Carlsbad store at which Nigro worked, and Foerster told him that “[i]f you’re going to stick with being sick, it's not helping your situation. It is what it is. You're not getting paid, and you're not going to be accommodated." Nigro also testified in his deposition that Sears's District Facilities Manager Alan Kamisugu told him not to be concerned about his pay issue because Chris Adams, Sears's District General Manager, had indicated to Kamisugu that Nigro was "not going to be here anymore." The district court disregarded the evidence proffered by Nigro, on the basis that "the source of this evidence is Nigro's own self-serving testimony."

We have previously acknowledged that declarations are often self-serving, and this is properly so because the party submitting it would use the declaration to support his or her position. S.E.C. v. Phan, 500 F.3d 895, 909 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that district court erred in disregarding declarations as "uncorroborated and self-serving"). The source of the evidence may have some bearing on its credibility, and thus on the weight it may be given by a trier of fact. But that evidence is to a degree self-serving is not a basis for the district court to disregard the evidence at the summary judgment stage. See 10A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 2727 (3d ed. 2011) ("[F]acts asserted by the party opposing the [summary judgment] motion, if supported by affidavits or other evidentiary material, are regarded as true."). Here, Nigro's declaration and deposition testimony, albeit uncorroborated and self-serving, were sufficient to establish a genuine dispute of material fact on Sears's discriminatory animus. We conclude that the district court erred in disregarding Nigro's testimony in granting Sears's motion for summary judgment.

Nigro’s direct supervisor Jason Foss also testified that Chris Adams said to him—referring to Nigro—that “I’m done with that guy.” The district court found Foss’s testimony to be inadmissible hearsay. But Foss’s statement attributed to Adams should be admissible as a party admission. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(D). Because Adams’s statements and the evidence proffered by Nigro could allow a reasonable jury to infer that Sears terminated Nigro because of his disability, there is a genuine issue of material fact. We reverse the district court’s entry of summary judgment on Nigro’s discrimination claim.²

II

The district court also granted summary judgment in favor of Sears on Nigro’s claim that Sears failed to accommodate his disability. The elements of a failure to accommodate claim are: “(1) the plaintiff has a disability under the FEHA, (2) the plaintiff is qualified to perform the essential functions of the position, and (3) the employer failed to reasonably accommodate the plaintiff’s disability.” Scotch v. Art Inst. of California-Orange Cnty., Inc., 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338, 358 (Cal. Ct. App. 2009). Because ulcerative colitis caused Nigro loss of sleep at night, his direct supervisor Foss had allowed Nigro to start his shifts at 9:00 A.M. instead of 6:00 A.M. as needed. The district court concluded that there were no genuine issues of material fact because Nigro continued to be accommodated by Foss, despite “any actual or perceived irritation” by Foss’s supervisor Foerster. We disagree.

Although Nigro testified that Foss “continued to accommodate him,” the record also reveals that Foerster did not approve this accommodation and required Nigro to arrive on time, at 6:00 A.M., “every day.” Nigro claims that Foerster’s unwillingness to accommodate his later start time “chilled” the “exercise of his right to request this accommodation.” This claim is supported by Nigro’s testimony that he came to work at 6:00 A.M. every day after he returned to work in May 2009, despite the fact that he felt as though “he needed to come in later every day.” A reasonable jury could infer that Foerster’s unwillingness to accommodate compelled Nigro to arrive at 6 A.M. every day despite his need to arrive later, so summary judgment is improper here.

III

Finally, the district court granted summary judgment on Nigro’s claim that Sears did not engage in an interactive process as required by FEHA. See Cal. Gov’t Code § 12940 (requiring that an employer engage in a “timely, good faith, [and] interactive process . . . to determine effective reasonable accommodations”). The district court found that Nigro never put Sears on notice that he needed an accommodation, and that even if his June 29, 2009 phone conversation with Foerster put Sears on notice, Sears was accommodating him. But again, by disapproving the accommodation, Foerster “chilled” Nigro’s “exercise of his right to request this accommodation.” Also, Foerster’s alleged statement on June 29 that he will not accommodate Nigro in the future and Foss’s testimony to the same effect created a genuine issue of material fact that renders summary judgment improper. In short, because Nigro's requests for accommodations in May 2009 and Nigro's telephone conversation with Foerster in June 2009 put Sears on notice that Nigro needed accommodations, a reasonable jury could find that Sears had an obligation to engage in the interactive process required by FEHA and failed to do so.

IV

We have previously held in several cases that it should not take much for plaintiff in a discrimination case to overcome a summary judgment motion. See, e.g., Diaz v. Eagle Produce Ltd. P'ship, 521 F.3d 1201, 1207 (9th Cir. 2008); Davis v. Team Elec. Co., 520 F.3d 1080, 1089 (9th Cir. 2008); Metoyer v. Chassman, 504 F.3d 919, 939 (9th Cir. 2007); Dominguez-Curry v. Nevada Transp. Dep't, 424 F.3d 1027, 1042 (9th Cir. 2005); Chuang v. Univ. of Cal. Davis, Bd. of Trustees, 225 F.3d 1115, 1124 (9th Cir. 2000). "This is because the ultimate question is one that can only be resolved through a searching inquiry—one that is most appropriately conducted by a factfinder, upon a full record." Id.

Here, Nigro presented several state law claims that deserved trial. It should not take a whole lot of evidence to establish a genuine issue of material fact in a disability discrimination case, at least where the fact issue on discrimination is genuine and the disability would not preclude gainful employment of a person working with accommodation. We acknowledge that this is not a wholly one-sided case on the side of Nigro, and Sears put forward substantial evidence showing that it had a non-discriminatory reason for terminating Nigro's employment, i.e., Sears's position that Nigro did not comply with Sears's attendance and leave policies resulting in job abandonment. It is possible that Sears will prevail at trial, but the statements attributed to Sears's supervisors by Nigro are, if not dispositive, sufficient to raise a genuine issue for the trier of fact. See Metoyer, 504 F.3d at 939 (holding that an employer's evidence of a non-discriminatory motive does not warrant entry of summary judgment when the employee also proffered evidence to the contrary).

It is, moreover, entirely besides the point that some of Nigro's evidence was self-serving, as it will often be the case in a discrimination case that an employee has something to say about what company representatives said to him or her. Such testimony is admissible, though absent corroboration, it may have limited weight. But again, the weight is to be assessed by the trier of fact at trial, not to be a basis to disregard the evidence at the summary judgment stage.
